It's Madam Prime Minister!

Margaret Thatcher leaves home in Chelsea district today on trip that ended at Buckingham Palace

U.K. Gives Thatcher Solid Election Win

Callaghan Leaves 10 Downing

LONDON — Margaret Thatcher won a solid governing majority today as Europe's first woman prime minister and Queen Elizabeth formally chose her to form a government that could stay in power for five years.

A jubilant Thatcher, the "iron lady" of British politics and Conservative leader for four years, spent 30 minutes with the Queen at Buckingham Palace — where the 53-year-old mother of twins officially assumed the job — and then drove to her new home, 10 Downing Street. Her husband Denis dutifully in the shadows but by her side throughout.

The man she defeated, Labor leader James Callaghan, 67, was already packing his bags at No. 10. He submitted his resignation to the Queen early this afternoon, after it became apparent that Thatcher had swept to a solid win.

Champion of free enterprise and determined to restrain Britain's unruly unions which had staged a series of national disruptions last winter, Thatcher reached the magic number of 318 seats, necessary for an absolute majority in the 635-seat House of Commons, at 2:46 p.m. London time, and by tea time, she was prime minister.

Final party standings compared to those at dissolution were as follows:

	1979	Diss
Labor	268	307
Conservatives	339	282
Liberals	11	14
Others	17	32
Total	635	635

The election results meant women hold Britain's top two positions of monarch and head of government — an unprecedented situation.

Outside No. 10 Downing, Thatcher — dubbed "the iron maiden" by the Russians on hearing she also would strengthen Britain's defences — appealed for national unity and said she would "strive to fulfill the trust and confidence of the British people."

"I feel very excited, very aware of my responsibilities," the prim Conservative leader said as she entered 10 Downing Street.

After resigning, Callaghan congratulated Thatcher and told a press conference "for a woman to occupy that office (of prime minister) is a tremendous moment in the nation's history."

As Callaghan cleared out his desks at 10 Downing Street, bouquets of blue flowers, the Conservatives' color, began arriving for Thatcher.

The results showed the country politically divided along regional lines with the prosperous south solidly for the Tories while Scotland and northern England remained behind the Socialists.

Minor and fringe parties took a beating along with Labor.

Gas Rationing Faces Calif.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The gasoline drought came with a crunch to the auto-dependent Los Angeles area today as Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. prepared to announce the first steps toward gas rationing.

The Brown proposal basically is a revival of the "odd-even" plan used in some areas in the 1974 gas shortage, limiting purchases to every other day.

State Energy Commission Chairman Richard Maullin confirmed the final version was competed late Thursday night.

Invitations were sent during the night to county government leaders to meet state officials in Sacramento Monday to give their reactions and decide whether they want their counties covered by the rationing plan, he said.

Maullin indicated that Brown would impose the provisions Tuesday at the earliest.

Oil company spokesmen said late Thursday night any such move would be a complete surprise to them and complained that they should have been consulted.

The gasoline shortage, a weekend problem for the past month, became severe in midweek Thursday in Los Angeles, which has one of the highest per capita concentrations of motor vehicles in the world.

About a third of the area's gasoline pumps apparently never opened for the day and almost all of them were closed by mid-afternoon.

At the few stations that had gas to sell, long lines formed, causing traffic jams as they backed up as much as a half mile into major traffic arteries.

A survey by the Automobile Club of Southern California indicated the shortage — particularly on weekends — will get progressively worse, and there were indications the area could be virtually out of gas on the Memorial day weekend.

Floods Rise For Some, Others Mop

Canadian Press

While residents of several Canadian communities prepared for more flooding, the worst was believed over today in the historic Yukon community of Dawson City where the downtown area was under three metres of water.

Dawson City Mayor Vi Campbell said that floodwaters from the Yukon River had caused about $5 million damage in the community, 500 kilometres north of Whitehorse, which has a population of about 1,200.

In the Northern Ontario community of Field, west of North Bay, there was some good news and some bad news.

The good news was lower floodwaters and $2 million in provincial disaster relief. The bad news was that the Sturgeon River is expected to rise again following rain forecast for Thursday night.

Officials co-ordinating flood-fighting from Winnipeg said the Red River should crest south of the city next Tuesday.

Harry Enns, minister responsible for emergency measures in the Manitoba government, said brisk winds could decrease soon and reduce the danger of damage to dikes protecting the town of Morris.

Meanwhile, more than 550 people in the Montreal area had been forced to leave their homes because of flooding lakes and rivers, and because civil protection officials are predicting that the situation could deteriorate in the next few days because of rain.

Ferry Breaks Pledged By NDP

Free ferries for the handicapped and reduced fares for commuters were promised today by NDP leader Dave Barrett and Victoria NDP candidate Charles Barber.

(Other provincial election stories on pages 32 and 33.)

At a press conference at party headquarters in Victoria, Barber said the main item in the NDP's ferry platform is a 20 per cent reduction for commuters.

Commuters could buy booklets of 10 return tickets for the price of eight.

Barber said if 10 per cent of the ferry users took advantage of the booklet rate, it would mean a net reduction of only two per cent in the B.C. Ferry Corp.'s revenues.

But that would be balanced by the interest earned on the money payed for the booklets in advance.

Those on the Handicapped Persons Income Assistance program would ride the ferries free. This would apply to the vehicles of those handicapped able to drive as well.

Chronically ill persons required by their doctor to use the ferries to reach medical treatment, would also be allowed to ride free, as would the vehicle used by persons accompanying such people.

And those travelling in recognized educational, recreational, sports, religious, youth or senior groups would be eligible to travel half fare. Seven days notice would be required.

These proposals wouldn't cost the corporation more

FERRY DOCK BURNS IN SEATTLE

SEATTLE (AP) — A fire broke out Thursday evening at the Washington State Ferry terminal here, forcing evacuation of Pier 52, ferry officials said.

Spokesman Newel Hunter said the fire, of undetermined origin, broke out at about 10 p.m. on a ferry slip between two main piers.

There were no immediate reports of injuries, Hunter said.

Ferry service to Bremerton and Winslow has been suspended until further notice, he said.

Minority Gov't Hurts Que. - PM

Prime Minister Trudeau told a Francophone audience at Drummondville, Que. Thursday that Social Credit Leader Fabien Roy is trying to attract separatist votes by advocating a minority government after the May 22 federal election.

Quebecers would be sacrificing their future if their votes helped establish a minority government," said Trudeau, adding that Joe Clark is too weak to deal with the separatist threat.

Roy denied in Rouyn, Que., that he is jumping on the Parti Quebecois bandwagon but used Quebec government figures to back his claim that Quebec has been deprived of $18 billion since 1961.

Clark, involved in a public difference with Roch La Salle, his Quebec lieutenant, over unity, Thursday said Quebecers would be convinced to stay in Canada if his party formed the government and provided a fresh face to federalism.

For details on these and other federal election reports, see pages 22-25.

Trade Surplus In March $150M

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada had a trade surplus of $150 million in March, about the same as the surplus a month earlier, Statistics Canada reported today.

But the federal agency also said that imports are increasing more rapidly than exports, signalling an end to the sharp rises in trade balances.

The preliminary report shows the surplus for the first quarter of 1979 was $653 million, down from a surplus of $758 million in the fourth quarter of 1978.

The surplus is also down sharply from the record $1.3 billion in the first quarter of 1978.

Canada had a record $3.5-billion trade surplus in 1978, up from $2.9 billion in 1977, mainly because the decline in the value of the dollar made Canadian goods cheaper abroad.

Trade Minister Jack Horner has predicted another record trade surplus for 1979. But to achieve it, there will have to be exceptional surpluses throughout the rest of the year.

Advance Vote Crush 'Worse than $1.49 Day'

Long lines frustrated many early voters at church hall polling station

A record crush of voters at the first day of the local advance poll for the May 10 provincial election surprised returning officers and led to grumbles from elderly voters Thursday.

The corridors of the First United Church on Balmoral Avenue were jammed to overflowing with elderly and handicapped who had been encouraged by government advertising to attend the advance poll. Other advance polling stations also reported heavy turnouts.

(See pages 32 and 33 for provincial campaign stories).

The church is the main advance polling station for Victoria, Oak Bay-Gordon Head, Esquimalt-Port Renfrew and Saanich and the Islands constituencies.

Exact figures of the first-day turnout were unavailable, but the returning officers estimate more than 2,500 people cast ballots.

The record turnout caught organizers unprepared and many of the early voters were left standing for long periods amid the confusion in the hot and stuffy hallways.

"It was worse than $1.49 Day, it was absolute chaos," said Mrs. Corinne Tench, of 1298 Camrose.

Mrs. Tench, who's confined to a wheel chair, said she went to the advance poll because of newspaper ads encouraging the handicapped to turn out and vote.

"But there were no provisions for people like me. I had to get somebody to wheel me in and then there was no table for me to write at. They looked completely overwhelmed and unprepared," she said.

The returning officers tried to downplay the problem, but many voters stormed angrily out of the hall, complaining about long waits, poor organization and unbearable heat.

Several told the Times, however, they would return today or Saturday to cast their ballots. The poll is open until nine p.m. tonight and from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday.

Thursday's poll didn't open till 1 p.m., but voters apparently thinking it was

Tornadoes Ravage Southeast

United Press International

Torrential rains, striking on the heels of tornadoes and windstorms, spawned flash floods in Louisiana and Tennessee today forcing hundreds of people from their homes.

As much as three metres of water covered some roads in central Tennessee, where floodwaters swamped a power station and caused widespread power outages.

A Tennessee Highway Patrol helicopter was used to evacuate about 30 people from the Roadway Express building in south Nashville. A Department of Safety spokesman said one person airlifted from the building required medical treatment.

"The building was completely surrounded by water and there was no other way to get them out," the spokesman said.

A twister ripped the roof off an apartment building in Brazil, Tenn., Thursday, injuring five people. Tornado-like winds toppled a 500-kilowatt power line and many buildings and trees in northwest Tennessee.

Up to 16 cm of rain soaked northern and central Louisiana today, flooding roads and forcing scattered evacuations. Sheriff's police in Louisiana's Webster Parish used a fishing boat to remove families from about a half dozen homes surrounded by high water.

The rains came on the heels of a storm system that sent tornadoes steam-rolling through the midlands. The onslaught of twisters and powerful storms left at least five people dead.

Tornadoes swarmed across Arkansas Thursday and touched down in several locations. Two people were injured in a tornado at Okolona and a 9-year-old Wrightsville girl was killed by a wind-downed powerline.

A swarm of tornadoes struck rural areas around Enid, Okla., Wednesday, causing $1.5 million damage and leaving at least four dead — two from heart attacks suffered while rushing to take shelter from the storms.

Thunderstorms blotted out the sky over Dallas Thursday. Air raid sirens wailed throughout the area as a thick, black wave of thunderheads moved through at midday. The sky grew so dark that light-sensitive streetlamps were activated automatically in parts of Dallas.

Mayor Bob Folsom ordered City Hall evacuated and dozens of city employees spent their lunch hour huddled in the building's basement.

"With as much glass as this building has, we didn't want to take a chance," a mayoral spokesman said.

Tornadoes in the Dallas suburbs of DeSoto and Terrell caused hundreds of thousands of dollars in property damage. Floodwaters, high winds and large hail were responsible for widespread property damage throughout in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, but injuries were minimal.

Heavy rains drenched sections of the Mississippi and Ohio Valleys. Louisville, Ky., where the Kentucky Derby is scheduled for Saturday, was soaked by a storm but forecasters said the track at Churchill Downs should be dry by post time.

Advance Polling Heavy

like normal election day, began showing up at the church at 8 a.m.

The same thing occurred in Vancouver, where the record number of advance voters there began showing up at the poll at 9 a.m.

The significance of the record turnout to the advance poll is unclear.

Oak Bay-Gordon Head returning officer Mrs. K.C. Murphy said the 1975 turnout was average, but at the prior election in 1972 when the NDP swept into power, record numbers cast advance ballots.

However University of Victoria associate professor of political science, Dr. Richard Powers believes the large turnout presages a Socred sweep May 10.

He argues that the large turnout means the complacency and indifference which are said to hurt the Socreds and which are supposed to be the hallmark of this election just isn't happening.

Meanwhile, a poll conducted at two Frying Dutchman restaurants in Vancouver shows hamburgers labelled Barrett burgers are being bought by 71 per cent of customers compared to only 20 for Bennett. The Liberals and Progressive Conservative leaders are well back. The products are identical.

Straw polls are banned in B.C. but John Dys, owner of the restaurants, said he has been conducting hamburger election polls in the province for 15 years, and he has never been out by more than 10 per cent. The poll correctly predicted Barrett's 1975 defeat by Bennett.

Insp. Best Elected

V.I. firemen have formed a sub-chapter to the B.C. branch of International Association of Arson Investigators.

Victoria fire inspector Pat Graham said the move was made because of the difficulty island investigators have in attending association meetings in Vancouver.

Ray Best of Victoria fire department was elected chairman.

than $500,000 annually Barber said.

"It would have a marignal effect on the ferry corporation, but a tremendous impact on those involved."

Fares for regular users would be frozen at least for the foreseeable future.

Barber and Barrett also proposed a study of inter-island water taxi or hovercraft service so that children on the outer Gulf islands could live at home while attending school.

They said an NDP government would establish a one-year task force on Vancouver Island transporation problems.

The commuter booklets would have a one-year time limit on them and would be available to anyone, resident and tourist alike.

U.K. Tories Solid Winners

Liberal strength declined to 11 seats from the 14 it held in the last parliament.

Former Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe, who faces a murder conspiracy charge in an alleged homosexual affair, was defeated Thursday in the North Devon constituency he has held for 20 years.

The dapper 50-year-old Liberal, who will appear at London's Old Bailey criminal court May 8, was overtaken by Conservative Tony Speller who had predicted victory — "not because of Mr. Thorpe's problems but because of the issues."

The Scottish Nationalists lost nine of their 11 seats. The massive swing in Thursday's voting against the Nationalists, who mushroomed into a major political force five years ago in a surge of Scottish nationalist sentiment, confirmed the party is on the rocks.

One of the casualties was Winnie Ewing, who won the party's first House of Commons seat in 1967. Mrs. Ewing, who lost to the Conservatices by 440 votes in Moray and Nairn, said: "We've lost this battle but our cause is just and we haven't lost the war."

Extremists on both the right and left failed to gain any seats and most of their candidates lost their deposits.

Stock prices soared and the pound gained in strength. But the unions were unhappy.

"We are going to have a confrontation situation generated if they do what they say they are going to do," said rail union leader Sidney Weighell in connection with Tory pledges to reduce work disruptions.

Mrs. Thatcher got little sleep overnight but appeared crisp on her London doorstep to wave triumphantly to supporters. She wore a blue two-piece suit and pale blue blouse.

Despite the dramatic change, Callaghan was cheered by about 1,000 spectators as he left 10 Downing Street for the sad audience with the Queen. He smiled and waved to the crowd but it appeared likely this would be his last national campaign and his last chance to govern.

Successor to Sir Harold Wilson in 1976, Callaghan gained great popularity as he steered Britain away from heavy inflation by restraining wage increases.

But the unions finally rebelled, staging winter strikes to gain big wage boosts, buckling Callaghan's inflation policy. He claimed his party could best handle the unions but the electorate turned away, attracted by the prospects of a woman leader who wanted to end "creeping socialism."

Lecture Series

The Canadian Association of Geographers annual convention at the University of Victoria May 27-June 2 is expected to attract about 400 geographers from as far away as Singapore.

Three days of papers and panel discussions will be followed by a day of field trips in the Victoria area. Also part of the itinerary are two-day field trips to the Olympic Peninsula and to view forestry on southern Vancouver Island.

This is the first time UVic has hosted the convention. Past president Dr. Charles Forward of the geography department will give the opening address. His talk is called The Geography of Canada and its Regions as Presented in English Language Canadian Universities.

Skyjacking to Cuba 'To Murder Castro'

Hijacking airplanes to Fidel Castro's Cuba became a popular crime before the introduction of metal detectors and other security measures at airports a decade ago.

Few people remember what happened to those sky cowboys, but in the southwestern tip of West Virginia lives a coal miner named Larry Rhodes, who wants to break years of silence to tell his skyjacking saga.

When he boarded a Delta Airlines flight in Tampa in February, 1968, with a gun, Rhodes kicked off a spree of similar hijackings to Cuba from this country — 18 that year and 31 in 1969.

But Rhodes didn't spent any time in jail for hijacking. He lived a bizarre two years in Cuba, where the government arranged his marriage to a 16-year-old woman who was supposed to have been a member of the Cuban secret police.

And when he decided to turn himself in to a U.S. embassy after the Cubans deported him in 1970, Rhodes was still a mystery figure, a man the Cubans suspected was a CIA agent.

Now, because he wants to write a book about his experiences, Rhodes is willing to say publicly why he hijacked that jet from Tampa: he intended to assassinate Fidel Castro.

"I had my reasons," says Rhodes, 39, who has returned to the coal mines near Justice, W. Va. "I had known some Cubans, friends of mine, who had gotten some pretty raw deals. I knew them in Florida and Chicago (where Rhodes had spent some time). I sympathized with them. That was just what my heart said, and that's what I did."

'A' May Be for Aging But Not Bullish Bronx

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Bronx, an aging aardvark who was sent here to end his days in sunny retirement, seems to have found the Fountain of Youth instead. Zoo officials say he has fathered 16 little Bronxes — and shows no signs of losing interest.

Bronx used to live in New York City, where he was senior aardvark at the Bronx Zoo. By 1970, Bronx was 13 and seemed to be pretty much at the end of the trail.

So his keepers sent him to Florida, where, instead of choosing a quiet retirement, he's begun to cut a dashing figure among the lady aardvarks of Crandon Park Zoo.

Bronx now is 22, believed to be an aardvarkian record for life in captivity. He has outlived most of his mates and many of his offspring.

Divorce Helping Housing: Economist

CALGARY (CP) — Divorce is good for the economy and in Calgary alone it adds $18 million annually to Alberta's prosperity, says economist Frank Clayton of Toronto.

Clayton made the observation in a report released Thursday on residential construction, commissioned by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Calgary.

He said that as more people live apart, the demand for housing increases.

Calgary's 25,000 divorces last year resulted in 2,000 extra homes — and that produced a big boost for the economy, he said.

Last year, $2.8 billion worth of homes were built in Alberta, 10 per cent of the gross provincial product, the report shows.

It resulted in 27,000 man-years of employment and a total wage bill of $483 million.

When secondary industries were considered, such as the manufacture of building materials, the economic impact was even greater.

Clayton estimated that for every $100 million worth of construction, an extra $63 million was generated in the country as a whole.

But because of the lack of secondary industry in Alberta, the figure for the province was only $25 million, the report says.

However, "if home prices continue to escalate as they are at the moment, people will just not be able to afford new homes," said Al Bell, housing association vice-president.

Israeli Planes Draw Fire

Associated Press

Syrian and Palestinian gunners fired at Israeli planes zooming over Beirut today, and the Syrians promptly flew protective missions over the tense Lebanese capital with their own jet fighters.

The low-flying Israeli planes drew anti-aircraft fire from guerrillas in the two major Palestinian refugee camps of Bourj el Barajneh and Chatilla as well as the shantytown of Sabra just south of Beirut.

A spokesman for Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization said Syrian peacekeeping forces also fired on the Israeli planes from positions south of the city. Pedestrians and traffic scrambled off the streets for cover.

Several hours later, Syria's MiG-21 jets made their run "in keeping with Syria's pledge to provide air protection for its area of peacekeeping operations in Lebanon," the PLO spokesman said.

There was no immediate comment from the Israeli command.

Israeli radio reported, meanwhile, that dozens of Arab prisoners will be released from Israeli jails late this month as a good-will gesture to Egypt at the start of negotiations on Palestinian autonomy.

In Cairo, the government announced that President Anwar Sadat has proposed an Islamic summit meeting to discuss means of regaining East Jerusalem calling its return a "cornerstone" to peace in the Middle East. Israel has insisted that the captured sector remain Israeli.

The autonomy talks by Egypt, Israel and the United States are to start about the same time as the prisoner release. Egypt had asked Israel for a series of gestures to encourage Palestinians in the Occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip to join the talks on their own future.

Political leaders in the West Bank and Gaza so far have rejected the autonomy scheme, which they see as a sellout of their goal of an independent state.

In the West Bank Thursday, Israeli troops used tear gas to disperse rock-throwing Arab students at the Vatican-supported Bethlehem University after the students raised the banned Palestinian flag in an anti-Israeli demonstration.

PLO Cell Smashed; 8 Charged

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Eight Israeli Arabs have been arrested and charged as members of a Palestinian guerrilla cell described as one of the most dangerous within Israel, police said today.

The eight were all charged with membership in the Al Fatah guerrilla organization, police said.

Members of the alleged group are between the ages of 20 and 25 and include three teachers. Monir Shakdah, 25, a laboratory assistant of Nazareth, was described as the leader of the group and charged with recruiting its other members.

They are accused of having planted a bomb at a Haifa synagogue in January, attempting to set fire to a bus with a Molotov cocktail and the writing of hostile slogans. The Haifa bomb did not explode.

Police were quoted as saying the cell was "the most serious and dangerous of those involving Israeli Arabs."

Khmer Rouge Lists Brutality

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Cambodia's ousted Khmer Rouge regime has charged Vietnam with grisly brutalities, including burning alive pregnant women and children and stringing prisoners like beads by running rope through holes in their ears and hands.

Cambodian U.N. Ambassador Thiounn Prasith delivered a summary of the accusations Thursday to the office of U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

The report charged that Vietnamese troops rounded up several hundred people in Kampot and Takeo provinces in February, "including small children, pregnant women and old people, sprayed gasoline on them and burned them alive."

In a brutal expression of discrimination, the Vietnamese captured numerous young girls and "immediately killed those who had a dark complexion." Lighter-skinned girls were raped and then massacred, the report said.

The Khmer Rouge, itself accused of killing hundreds of thousands of people since it came into power in April 1975, charged that Vietnam was embarked on "a deliberate policy of genocide" against Cambodia.

The regime, which was led by Prime Minister Pol Pot, still has official U.N. recognition despite its overthrow in a Vietnamese-led invasion last Christmas.

In another part of southwestern Cambodia, the report said Vietnamese soldiers pierced the ears and hands of Cambodian prisoners and "strung cords through to link them while they were taken to places of execution."

Other charges included the brutal hanging of captives by first tying them up, dangling them from trees and draining blood from their bodies to maximize the pain and horror of the execution.

Labor issues

This is the third in a series of Times editorials on provincial election issues.

It's pretty clear in this provincial election whom the leaders of organized labor in B.C. want to see elected to power. For several reasons Social Credit is not a favorite among the offices of the B.C. Federation of Labor, or the big unions like the IWA and B.C. Government Employees Union.

And if most of the 400,000 union workers in the province voted a straight New Democratic Party ticket, there would be little doubt about the outcome. But like people in other walks of life, many union members vote Socred or even Tory or Liberal.

Still, labor is traditionally recognized as a solid NDP bloc. Sometimes the ties are a little too close for the comfort of an NDP government, and the party is sensitive about this.

Before the election was called, the B.C. Fed held a series of rallies around the province which effectively attacked the government for its perceived anti-labor bias. But during the campaign itself, there has been little public sign of organized labor's work on behalf of the party.

Is there a real difference between Socred and NDP positions on labor matters?

In a highly simplistic presentation in one of its early "You Compare" ads, Social Credit compared its record on "labor unrest" with the NDP's — less than three million man-days lost to strikes and lockouts versus more than four million between 1972 and 1975.

"Labor-management relations improved," boasted Social Credit. True, but a more accurate assessment would give a good deal of credit to the NDP's excellent labor code, which junked the discredited mediation services commission and replaced it with a bigger, more professional labor relations board that slowly established a more peaceful climate between labor and management. Naturally, when the Socreds came back to office, they were the beneficiaries. It is a sign of how well the NDP government legislated that despite the rhetoric, the Socreds actually changed so little of it.

Another obvious factor which the Socreds prefer to overlook is wage and price controls, which imposed strict ceilings on wage increases and made strikes virtually ineffective for most of the party's term in office.

One issue that seems to divide the major parties is "right to work." Although Premier Bennett has tried strenuously to allay fears that Social Credit would introduce right to work — that is, an end to the closed shop — organized labor continues to see signs of the opposite.

It is a perennial issue at the party's annual conventions, and a resolution backing the necessary changes to B.C. labor legislation comes closer and closer to passage each year. But party conventions do not necessarily make government policy. The NDP likewise likes to forget its past resolutions calling for the nationalization of MacMillan Bloedel and B.C. Tel. When the NDP came to office, of course, neither was accomplished.

Both parties have their ideological zealots; luckily their elected leaders are more pragmatic. Right to work would bring chaos to the B.C. workplace. The major corporations which rely on the big unions for their workforce are against it, knowing that it would cause violent reactions among many of their employees.

Except that the NDP and its allies in organized labor continue to claim that the Socreds will bring in right to work, and that Premier Bennett continues to deny the allegation in very clear language, right to work is not an issue in the election at all.

The one area where an outsider can see some genuine differences is essential services legislation. Social Credit has done much to expand the definition of "essential." Amendments it pushed through the legislature last year extended the Essential Services Disputes Act, which covered police, firemen and hospital employees, to all municipal workers and those employed by school boards, colleges and universities as well.

The NDP has promised to repeal the whole law. It maintains that there are enough tools in the labor code to deal with such problems, and when these fail the legislature can be called into session to legislate an end to a strike or lockout that hurts the public.

In fact, both parties have resorted to special legislative sessions to force strikers and locked out industries back to work. Last year the government ended a six-week closure of schools in the Kootenays and one of the NDP's last acts was an omnibus bill ending strikes in the supermarkets, on the B.C. Railway and by propane gas truck drivers. That was one of the reasons organized labor did so little to help the party in the 1975 election.

It is a distortion of the NDP's past record to assert, as Premier Bennett does, that by repealing the essential service legislation, the NDP is prepared to see the public go without police and fire protection, and would let the hospitals shut down. When members of the Hospital Employees Union did go on strike several years ago under the NDP, certain hospital workers were designated as essential by the Labor Relations Board and the hospitals continued to care for patients, although at a reduced level.

But then so does the NDP distort Social Credit's record on right to work for its own purposes. Each creates a bogeyman to whip up support among the uncommitted. But the voters probably see that under the NDP we would not have a dictatorship of the proletariat, and with Social Credit the government would not abolish unions.

The realities of governing quickly establish in any party a very pragmatic sense of just how far it can go.

NORMAN GIDNEY

Loffmark exposed: marxist!

It's amazing what a change of perspective and four years will do to alter attitudes. Back in 1975, during the runup to the provincial election which saw the NDP thrown out, every new addition to the Socred cause from the ranks of the old-line parties was welcomed with open arms like a long-lost prodigal son.

To listen to then opposition leader Bill Bennett, these were men like Saul on the road to Damascus. They saw the light and foresook their allegiance to Conservative or Liberal faiths for a far greater cause. "Noble" seemed to be a word often on the lips of Social Credit officials as they watched five sitting MLAs, a former MP and numerous other ex-Liberals and ex-Tories join the holy crusade against Socialism.

But now that a tiny current is running in the other direction — specifically, oldtime Socred Ralph Loffmark's endorsement of the NDP — it seems to have struck a raw nerve in the party.

'Keyhole economists'

He backs NDP leader Dave Barrett's "vision of the north" and says he's a "bigger man" than Bill Bennett. "I think the Bill Bennett government today is not the Social Credit government that was in this province dfrom 1952 to 1972. It is a direct descendant of the old coalition government of 1950. It's a government made up of keyhole economists, people with limited vision."

Loffmark's remarks carry a good deal of weight: He was minister of industrial development, and later had the health portfolio — a highly unpopular job in a time of tight health care budgets — in the W.A.C. Bennett administration during the years from 1963 to 1972.

Attacking the younger Bennett for stinting hospitals or social services might make a mark on committed NDP voters, but it's something of a pro forma ritual in B.C. elections. However, hitting the Socreds for their lack of leadership in economic development, supposedly their strong suit and where the socialists are painted as inept amateurs, obviously hurts.

It shows in the Socreds' reactions to Loffmark's criticism. They couldn't resist a couple of low blows, when probably the wisest thing would have be to ignore Loffmark and his endorsement of the NDP.

ELECTION DIARY '79

Bennett said Tuesday night: "We do not have to stoop to shoddy manoeuvres to try and capture the vision of W.A.C. Bennett . . ." In Nanaimo next day he depicted the Independent Business People of B.C., which is paying for pro-NDP ads featuring Loffmark, as a socialist front organization consisting of a few tame businessmen.

And Economic Development Minister Don Phillips said Loffmark was just full of sour grapes, because he was rebuffed when he came looking for a patronage job as head of a new provincial airline he proposed back in 1976.

(If they turned down Loffmark for a government job, he seems to be one of the few old Socreds who didn't get one. Old colleagues like Robert Bonner and Ray Williston were signed up in a hurry.)

Loffmark denies that he asked for a position. In replying to Phillips' charges, he showed the same pugnacious style with which went at the medical profession almost 10 years ago, earning him comparisons with Adolf Hitler (that from Scott Wallace). If the Socreds want to hit below the belt, "Loffie" can throw a few spitballs too.

He brought his airline idea to Phillips, and also met Bennett and then-transportation minister Jack Davis to discuss the project. All three were negative.

Said Loffmark: "I was disappointed when I left, not because I wanted a job but because they didn't understand the economics of transportation, or more specifically the aviation industry.

"And what is worse, they didn't want to know. The three of them were not only ill-informed, but close-minded about the matter."

But the Socreds really have only themselves to blame. Back in 1965, then-Times editor Bruce Hutchison exposed Loffmark's marxist leanings when Loffmark proposed an economic and customs union with the United States, today a fairly respectable political position, but then quite unpopular.

He was tagged a marxist for holding that union with the U.S. was desirable and inevitable — sound marxian economic determinism, in Hutchison's phrase.

'A great find': W.A.C.

"This idea is marxism and it is shared by thousands of our ablest businessmen, labor leaders, professors and humbler folk who detest the memory of Karl Marx. . . . Mr. Loffmark and others like him are not communists. They are violent enemies of communism, sincere advocates of human freedom and perhaps too candidly honest for their own good in politics. But their philosophy is marxism all the same."

This assessment appears to have been entirely ignored at the time. Loffmark was the party's bright light back in the 1960s. He spent a mere six months on the back benches before W.A.C. Bennett made him a cabinet minister. Two years after that he was named to the all-powerful treasury board.

Unluckily for Bill Bennett, the former premier is not around any more to testify who has been a more faithful keeper of the flame of the original Socred vision of development and progress in the north, but back in 1966 he said of Loffmark: "I said before he was a great find and in the government I am finding more and more how talented he is."

Sickening palaver

The political palaver presently swamping the province is sickening in its brevity of fact. Not one of the three parties in their anxiety to be first have touched on the hospital situation. Ab Kent of the Times wrote an article (Old Soldier Is Still Fighting, April 11) meant to bring the majority of decent thinking citizens of Victoria out of their lethargy in connection with the hospital fiasco.

It would appear that the plague is spreading across the land. We read and hear that doctors are not satisfied with their $60,000-plus incomes. This is permeating down to the lowest grade of hospital operator. The patients, who are they? They're the wherewithal on which everything is based. Without patients — no doctors, no medical staff, no nurses, nothing. Yet the patients are at the end of the line in consideration. Medicare is being threatened across the nation.

We in B.C. have a boastful minister of health who says we have the best medical plan in Canada. The only province he obviously missed is Quebec, where medicare (Blue Cross) is being run on a doctor-patient level of decent understanding. Regardless of the aforesaid, if the best medicare is in B.C., how does it compare with Alberta?

At election time words flow hither and yon and never on the important issues like health that face us from day to day. We, the gullible healthy public are too disinterested to allow any more than to give them passing thought. We want more men of integrity like Dr. Scott Wallace to pound at the doors of selfishness until action is the result. Come on you people of Victoria. Protest and protest — come to Memorial Pavilion (for instance) and get facts firsthand. Then apply them to the hospital situation in general. Write to the political parties and demand action to see that the sick, the injured, the poor, those on welfare, get what was promised in the initial stages of B.C. medicare, the best of care, proper staffs, proper supervision.

We in Veterans Hospital have made our contributions to society in many ways. Governments of the past promised us that their efforts to look after the sick and maimed would never cease or degenerate. Well, to all whom it may concern, hospital operation is surely scraping the bottom of the barrel today. — Arthur Dutton, Veterans Hospital, 2355 Richmond Road.

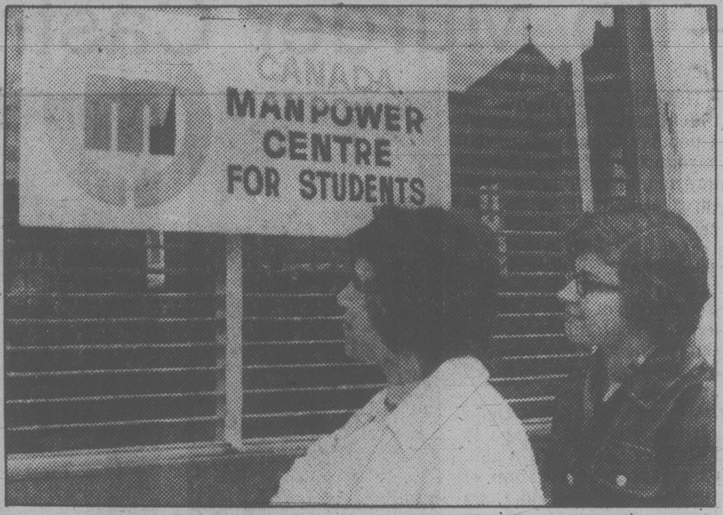
Public vs private

How many British Columbians know that the famous Waffle Manifesto was sponsored by five prominent members of the 1973 NDP cabinet and that the manifesto calls for public ownership of the means of production?

How many realize that "public ownership of the means of production" is another way of saying "government ownership of the means of production", which is what it is.

When a government owns the means of production, great economic power is added to the legislative and administrative power the government already wields. This enormous concentration of power in government hands is incompatible with political and individual freedom. The only safe way to prevent this concentration of power is by keeping the ownership of the means of production in private hands. I believe that Mr. Bennett realized this essential fact and decided to prevent this concentration of power in government hands by distributing the BCRIC shares to the people of British Columbia.

I wonder how many NDP supporters have asked themselves what would happen to their right to strike if the government owned the means of production? Unfortunately for the economic future of this beautiful province, it's a safe bet that few of them will do so. — Peter Gage, 308 - 250 Douglas Street.



B.C. government cut summer jobs at the last minute, student says.

More job problems

Regarding the article, Many Feel the Pinch of Student Job Cuts, (Times, April 30) as the 23-year-old student interviewed by reporter Derek Sidenius, I applaud the story, but must also point out that much of what I said was ignored in the article. I would therefore like to add the following informatin to that given by the article:

● My gardening job was not cancelled as claimed by Mr. Sidenius. The number of students hired for that job was decreased from six last year to four this year, however, and all these students, for budgetary reasons (my boss told me) had to be first and second year students. The four students who had done the job the year before and were returning were, as third and fourth year students, therefore ineligible.

● Besides the gardening job I was offered work with another ministry in March, following the submission of a resume. The particular branch involved requested 16 summer students, but received none.

● Some government personnel people have told me each government department was told to submit its normal requests and to expect its normal share of summer students. Of three government ministries I have spoken with none were told how many students they would be allowed to hire until less than a week before these students were expected to begin work on May first.

● A government spokesman told me, ministries were told to priorize summer jobs as always. Yet when government funding to ministries arrived, priorities were in many cases ignored (an instance cited to me was that of fourth priority being given preference over a first priority). Also, summer jobs in at least one ministry, environment, which normally go to Victoria, were this year distributed throughout the province.

● Finally, most summer jobs in the government-subsidized private sector, a labor ministry employee informed me, pay near or at minimum wage levels of three dollars per hour. No students can save enough money to attend university at such a wage unless they live at home and are heavily subsidized by their parents. I and many other Victoria students share neither of these advantages.

Obviously a good many anomalies exist in the provincial government's summer hiring policies this year, which is why I referred to the B.C summer works program as a "fiasco". — "Bob", a Victoria student.

Vital issue

I wish to address very briefly one issue of dire importance to us all — namely, the introduction of nuclear power to Vancouver Island.

Robert Bonner, a Socred appointee who presently heads B.C. Hydro and ex-Socred minister of labor and attorney-general, is on record stating support for introducing nuclear power reactors on this very island.

On the other hand, the NDP caucus has stated its opposition not only to building nuclear power reactors, but to all uranium mining in British Columbia.

Having done some graduate work in human genetics, I have learned that any amount of radioactivity in our atmosphere and earth is undesirable, since radiation increases the genetic mutation rate. I also learned that the potential effects of large scale increases in this mutation rate could be catastrophic. Just one possibility is that future generations will only give "birth" to stillborns.

This is not intended as a prophecy of doom, but nevertheless, it is a possibility based on our current knowledge of the potential effects of radiation on the human reproductive capacity. When you cast your vote, I suggest thinking of that possibility, and then think of the respective positions of the parties and Bonner in the driver's seat. — Stephen Jay Fader, 2416 Millstream Road.

I'll remember

For service with the British Columbia provincial government from September, 1951 to December, 1977 I received retiring allowance in the amount of $1,697.

For an absence of 3½ months during that time I was penalised a total of $2,014.80.

I will remember the discrepancy on May 10. — Harry P. McKeever, 1259 Stancil Lane.

All would benefit

The government of B.C. has been tossing a piece of legislation around for almost five years — this being the amendment to the B.C. building standards code to require access for handicapped persons. It is true to say that all people would directly or indirectly benefit by its enactment. There is much support from varying groups who definitely agree that this would certainly be a progressive stand in which B.C. could be proud.

We are not in a position to point the finger at the government for their lack of understanding or foresight, but we believe that the amendment of the building code should not be used as a political game.

Every human being has the right to accessibility yet for many this right is denied. How much longer do we wait? There are many opportunities for people if only the doors could be unlocked. During life there are many avenues that one can take but with such barriers to overcome, life becomes an arduous task instead of a challenging one. — Elly Bowerman, Handicapped Action Committee, 521-620 View Street.

The disturbing decline of Montreal

By DUSKO DODER
The Washington Post

MONTREAL — It seems hard to realize that only a decade or so ago the sheer beauty of this city would overwhelm a visitor in the way such cities as Paris or San Francisco do.

Montreal is still a lovely place, but one cannot help noticing that its former elegance is on the wane, that there is a certain air of seedy grandeur about Westmount and its upper-middle-class homes.

One feels in the air the ethnic tensions and the settling of scores that followed the victory in Quebec elections 2 1/2 years ago of a French-Canadian separatist party. Since then, about 75,000 persons have left Quebec, major corporations such as Sun Life and Canadian Pacific have moved their corporate headquarters, and the provincial government has taken steps to make this city and the entire province as French as possible.

Walking around the Unversity of Montreal campus one notices "stop" signs as an oddity. The provincial government ordered all formerly bilingual street signs changed into French, but the university has refused to comply fully, arguing that "stop" has international usage.

Moving on to other picturesque parts of the city — through those quaint parks, squares and streets I was in the habit of touring during my previous visits, I was shocked by changes.

The statue of Britain's Lord Nelson, for instance, has been taken down from the plaza near the old Nelson Hotel, officially "for restoration." But people laugh when asked if that is the real reason.

Montreal is a French-speaking city now, although there are about 800,000 English speakers still living here. The changes wrought by the separatist government of Premier Rene Levesque seem to have the approval of most French-speaking Quebec residents.

A joke circulating here suggests that Levesque is still beyond criticism. The premier, the joke says, ran over a man while driving.

"The police took a breathalyzer test — on the dead man, not on Levesque," the punch line goes.

The joke refers to a 1977 accident in which Levesque ran over a derelict lying in the street but was not held criminally responsible.

Among the byproducts of Quebec's current political turmoil is a strong revival of French cultural and artistic life. French publishing is increasing, and the quality and variety of translations as well as the modern Quebec and French books are impressive.

But the nationalistic undertone of many popular books and songs has a curiously disturbing effect on non-French visitors. French-speaking residents, perhaps because of their past inferior role in the predominantly English-speaking Canada, seem to have become rather neurotic about English Canadians.

"I hate them, the English, I hate them, from the verb to hate, a verb invented just for them," says a character in a play by Francoise Loranger. "I hate them because I feel like their slave when they give me orders on the job. I hate them because they force me to speak their language."

Other plays also show the "English" as brutes depriving the Quebec residents of their livelihood, and brutally exploiting them in other ways.

A song by Felix Leclerc, "L'Alouette en Colere" (The Angry Lark), is almost a battle cry against English Canada.

Leclerc, considered the grand old man of the chansonniers, writes:

I have a son crushed by the temples of finance where he cannot enter, and by those of words (in) which he cannot live.

I have a son despoiled as was his father, a drawer of water, sawer of wood, tenant, unemployed in his own land.

He has nothing left but a beautiful sight of the river and his mother tongue which they will not recognize. I have a son in revolt, a son humiliated, a son who tomorrow will be an assassin.

The song, written in 1974, ends this way:

My son is in prison and I, I feel in the depth of me, for the first time, despite myself, between flesh and bone, a burning anger.

Leclerc's last song, "Mon Fils" (My Son), which came out in December, is an ode to the coming to power of Levesque's Parti Quebecois. It talks about the Quebecer as an impoverished man of a rich land owned by foreigners.

It is argued here that such outbursts of nationalist passion are a temporary phenomenon likely to subside and that they are confined to extremist fringes of the Quebec society.

At the home of painter Marcelle Ferron the other day, I listened to a discussion between the leading intellectuals of the Parti Quebecois, including writers Pierre Vadeboucoeur, Marcel Rioux and Helen Pelletier Baillargion.

Theirs are moderate views with a common theme resting on the desire for the drastic affirmation of the French language and Quebec culture. The current excesses, they seem to suggest, are to be expected in a period of political uncertainty.

And yet, despite their moderation, these are the people who provide ideological foundations for the Levesque government's actions and the climate of nationalistic exclusivity they breed.

Perhaps the economic decline of Montreal, once the financial capital of Canada, is the price the residents have to pay to achieve the status of a nation in North America.

Campaign without people

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

SYDNEY, N.S. — In the ludicrous lifespan of a campaign that is being run without the voters being involved, the ultimate in McLuhanesque horror stories was reached in the sleepy Maritimes this week.

We are, we know, in a struggle between politics and the electronic press, the former using the latter to give the impression that much is happening while, in fact, little is.

Using this formula, it seemed perfectly natural that Joe Clark, following his careful campaign plans, was scheduled to awake at 6:45 a.m. Monday so he could fly all the way to Yarmouth on the tip of the Nova Scotia peninsula merely to appear on a hot-line radio show on CJLS, with one Ray Zinck. As it was, fog zonked out the pleasure of Zinck and — the need for the sterile delights of the electronic media being what it is — alternative plans had to be laid.

It's why 50 otherwise sane journalists were found in the first-class lounge of the Halifax airport Monday morning listening to a one-way conversation between the Conservative leader and the invisible Mr. Zinck in far-off Yarmouth.

But wait! Since there were all those voracious TV cameras about without even a non-event to record, they must justify their existence. So we had the spectacle — Franz Kafka, where are you when we need you — of TV reporters in the lounge of an airport filming print reporters who were listening to a Clark voice giving answers to questions that couldn't be heard. Could you make it up?

The Tories solemnly went along with the farce and somewhere, somehow, across the land the innocent ignored voter was peppered with reports of what Joe Clark purportedly said to questions that no one to this moment knows. It was all rather like dealing through an interpreter in China in the realization that the information is being laundered two ways.

The charade above (which would be laughed out of Mork and Mindy) contains the thread of this strange election where voters, in their lassitude and feelings of blah toward all three federal leaders, refuse to come out of their burrows.

Since they do, the politicians have to rely more and more on less and less. Once the Zinck high drama was over, Clark flew in his jet as far as he could down the peninsula, then bused for an hour-and-a-half through the Annapolis Valley so he could meet some 60 Tories in the Legion Hall in Digby.

The purpose was to aid the attempt of Charlie Haliburton (a Tory pal from university days) to win back the South-Western Nova seat. The thought occurs that if you can't win in Nova Scotia with a name like Haliburton, there is no justice, but then again one wonders if a jolting bus ride that consumed three hours overall was worth the excellent fish chowder and the 60 aging and committed Tories.

One old man, on tottering legs, confided, "I just wanted to live through the winter so I could see Joe, and vote."

There was the dog, proof of the symbiotic need of the cameras or the politician and vice versa. The well-meaning lady produced the whimpering little spaniel, dressed in a Conservative coat of blue, for a surprise to Clark. When he reached for it, it cowered and ran.

The fuss alerted the slumbering cameras, which arrived just in time for the arranged reconciliation, Clark and the handler by now having the dog in a loving, conversational pose. A photo opportunity is worth a thousand news editors.

Another jet flight to Cape Breton, yet another taped TV interview, and — a rare event that brought pangs of nostalgia to the older reporters — an actual rousing rally in a Sydney high school gym with pictures of a 19-year-old Joe Clark pasted on the wall, a band that knew its market (You Are My Sunshine, Pack Up Your Troubles) and two rube comics told manurespreader jokes.

The supposed object was to help Tory Joyce McDougall in her joust against NDP incumbent Andy Hogan. But in reality it was to record Clark on film fighting his way through the massed flesh of a hall booked, as always, to hold slightly less than the number arranged.

In a complete day of ranging Nova Scotia, Clark had been exposed to a mere 700 people. The aim, of course, is at the 22 million who were not present and hopefully glanced at TV.

It is the first Canadian election where the few voters who are allowed in on the event are used as mere film backdrop — just as the flags, the bunting and the dog.

A lot of huffing about puffing

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

"Mommy, why is the policeman bothering that man?"

"He's smoking a cigarette dear."

"But, mommy, you smoke cigarettes."

"I know, dear, but this is a public place."

"But mommy, you smoke cigarettes in the street. Isn't that public?"

"Hush, dear, I'll explain it all when we get home."

"Mommy, that policeman sure looks silly. Why isn't he out catching crooks?"

"He's just doing his duty, dear."

"Is it all right if I laugh, mommy? If I don't do it too loud?"

The real danger in the city of Toronto's attempt to pass a new anti-smoking bylaw is that it will make policemen look ridiculous. That's a price too high for any city to pay, even for the benefit of getting rid of slightly used tobacco smoke in stores and offices.

Toronto passed its first no-smoking bylaw in 1977. But the Ontario Supreme Court has declared the bylaw invalid because storekeepers had to enforce it. So the city executive committee has decided to try for a new bylaw that will do pretty much what the old, invalid one tried to do.

The city's lawyers are still trying to figure out how to accomplish this neat trick, but one thing is already clear to them: The police will have to go after smokers. The poor cop on the street will either have to ignore the bylaw or spend a lot of his time hassling smokers and being the butt of smart alec jokes.

Metro's police force already has enough troubles. The police won't be able to hire any new constables this year and won't even be able to bring 12 cadets on to the force.

Toronto City Council should return to exhorting people to quit smoking in public places and give up trying to pass unenforceable bylaws. As it is, the Toronto politicians are making ashes of themselves.

A romp in the skull

NEW YORK — In its continuing struggle to force the press to shape up, the Supreme Court now states that journalists can be required to tell lawyers what opinions they held while preparing material that public men subsequently believe has libeled them.

Since this article is about the Supreme Court (nine public men) and since I am almost certain to forget by noon tomorrow what opinions I harbor at the outset of composition, let me record them here before getting to the point, so I will not have to plead memory failure when hauled in for depositions.

First, I am irritated to find myself writing about the Supreme Court. I suspect that most people think the Supreme Court dull and stop reading the instant their eyes see the words "Supreme Court". As the sort of journalist whose survival depends upon holding a mass audience, I believe that writing about the Supreme Court damages my survival chances.

Does this indicate malice toward the court? No. It is my opinion at this moment — don't hold me to it tomorrow — that the court is useful. On the other hand, if it did not exist, I would not be getting ready to write about it at this very moment and would be free to write about the Lee Marvin case, which would guarantee a comfortably large readership.

It is my opinion that I would rather be writing about the Lee Marvin case than about the Supreme Court. It is my further opinion that I have chosen to write about the Supreme Court only because I am suffering right now from mild indigestion brought on by an unsatisfactory ham-and-swiss sandwich and two cups of bad coffee at lunch.

In my experience, writings committed under the influence of gastric distress almost invariably deal with grey subjects, like the Supreme Court, the SALT talks and the troubled Middle-East. It is my opinion that indigestion leads inexorably to the Supreme Court, or worse.

I harbor other opinions that will doubtless subtly influence what is to be written. Before starting this, it was my opinion that it would be far more pleasant to walk in the park and look at the daffodils than to write about the Supreme Court. Since then, however, the sky has clouded and it is now my opinion that the golden moment for looking at daffodils has been lost, lost to the Supreme Court.

Will this sense of having been cheated of duty produce malice in what is to be written about the Supreme Court? Not in my opinion. In my opinion, I am very nearly bankrupt in the malice department, having wasted most of it years ago on trifles, with the result that I barely have enough malice left to get safely through an average day in New York or Washington. I am certainly not going to waste any of the precious residue on the Supreme Court.

At least that's my opinion at this very moment about my state of mind at this very moment.

Opinions, opinions! All these opinions that press in at the moment of journalistic creation, and all must be disclosed. Who knows what fleeting wisp of opinion, intervening between mind and typewriter, might poison the cool stream of reasoned discourse and do injustice to the Supreme Court?

Just now, for example, there is a severe onset of firm opinion that it is time to buy a new pair of shoes. This is tempered by the opinion that $85 is too much to pay for shoes, which leads to the opinion that if there were any justice in the tax law, $85 would not seem too high a price.

This is turn produces the opinion that if the Supreme Court really cared about justice it would do something about the tax law instead of licensing the lawyers to invade the privacy of my skull. It is my opinion that by applying itself to trivia instead of the tax law, the Supreme Court is making it impossible for me to afford $85 shoes.

Does the root of malice grow here in this sense that the Supreme Court cares more about my head than it does about my feet? Not in my opinion. Though I have a high opinion of my feet, it is my opinion at this writing that my capacity for outrage is too small to let high regard for pedal appendages influence my respect for the majesty of the Supreme Court.

That, of course, is only an opinion, and a good lawyer could doubtless persuade a jury that though it may have been my opinion for a fleeting moment, it was not my opinion two hours ago when I was yearning to move those very same feet through daffodils rather than write unmaliciously of the Supreme Court.

In my opinion it would have been wiser to write something today about duelling Ayatollahs and risk a firing squad, because I've forgotten what I meant to say about the Supreme Court, although I knew every step of the way what opinions were influencing whatever it was.

today's markets

Toronto

Surging mining stocks pushed the Toronto stock market up moderately in active mid-afternoon trading today.

The heavily-weighted metals and minerals group climbed 17.18 to 1,285.66 to lead the six gainers among the 14 stock groups while transportation shares led the eight losers.

Among industrials, Falconbridge Nickel A gained 3⅜ to $59¾, Canadian Occidental Petroleum 2¾ to $36¾, Atco A 1⅜ to $23, Inco 1 to $25¼ and Alberta Energy Co. ⅞ to $25.

McIntyre Mines advanced 2 to $46½, Pine Point Mines ¾ to $33½ and Denison Mines ⅝ to $22. Brenda Mines declined ½ to $16¾ and Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting ⅜ to $19⅞.

New York

The stock market pulled back today amid further evidence of rising interest rates.

The 2 p.m. EDT Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was down 3.81 at 853.78.

About half of the average's loss, however, came as the result of ex-dividends, or dividend payment adjustments, in the prices of four stocks in the average.

New York's Citibank raised its prime lending rate to 11¾ from 11½ per cent, joining most other leading banks at that level.

There was speculation that the basic charge on blue-chip loans might soon go to 12 per cent. Analysts were also talking of the possibility of an increase in the discount rate by the Federal Reserve Board.

International Business Machines, which is in the process of splitting its stock 4-for-1, dropped 2¾ to $313½.

The post-split shares, trading on a "when-issued" basis, opened at $79½ and went as high as $80 before falling back to $79.

Montreal

Prices surged in moderate noontime trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today.

Brinco climbed ⅞ at $8¼, Hudson's Bay Co. ⅜ at $27½, Inco ⅞ at $25, IU International ⅝ at $16⅛, Massey-Ferguson ¼ at $13¼, Newfoundland Tel. ⅛ at $11⅞, Norcen Energy Resources ⅛ at $21⅛, and York Lambton three cents at 68 cents.

Royal Trustco lost ⅛ at $16¾, Walker-Gooderham A ⅛ at $43⅛, and Westcoast Transmission ⅛ at $13⅞.

London

The London stock market closed at an all-time high and the pound gained in strength. The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed up 5.1 to 558.6.

Dealers said the Conservative victory in the general election pushed stock prices higher but profit-taking led to a mixed result.

Industrials, oils and golds firmed.

Canadian shares were mixed.

Thru-jets

Only Western has them from Vancouver to Las Vegas, Phoenix, San Diego.

Now Western is the most convenient way to fly to Las Vegas, Phoenix and San Diego.

Because we can fly you there without a change of plane. Which means less worry about your luggage (we offer pre-clearance of Customs in Vancouver). And no running from one airline to another in the terminal.

There's delicious dining on all our flights to these cities. Along with complimentary beverages for adults.

So next trip to the sun, Western's the one!

Another reason why we're the only way to fly.

Hawaii/Alaska/Western USA/Florida/Canada/Mexico

Your Travel Agent knows—just say you want to fly Western's thru-jets to Las Vegas, Phoenix or San Diego.

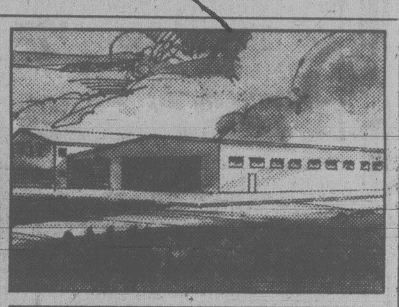
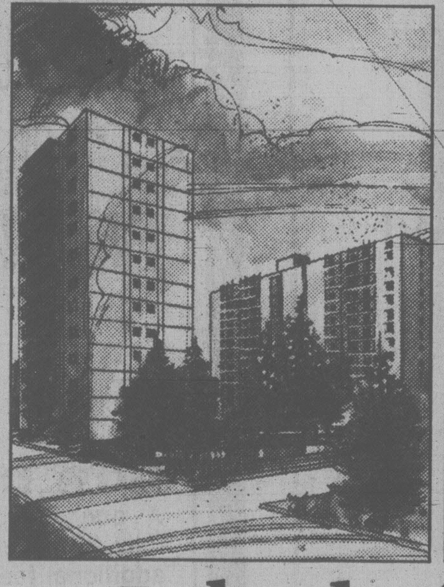
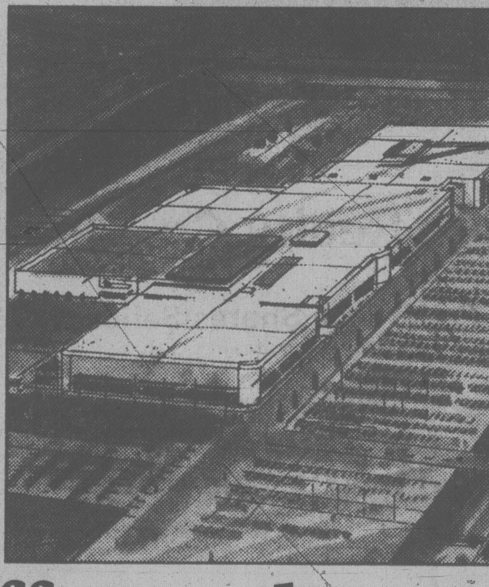
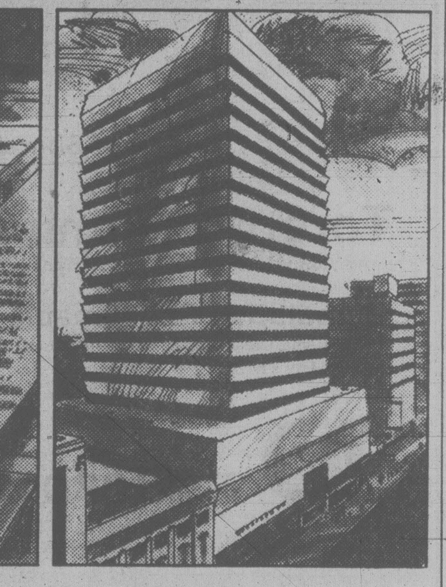
An investment in income producing real estate.









Lehndorff Canadian Properties

Lehndorff Canadian Properties, a limited partnership, is being formed to offer investors participation in the ownership of a diversified, professionally-managed portfolio of income producing properties.

Initial properties, illustrated above, include various interests in a downtown office building, a large shopping centre and an industrial property in Edmonton, another industrial property in Calgary and a major apartment complex in Mississauga.

The objectives of the partnership are to provide investors with growth in cash income (to be distributed quarterly commencing Sept. 30th, 1979), potential for capital appreciation and the advantages of available tax benefits to maximize after-tax income.

The Lehndorff Group, who will manage the partnership, is a large and experienced organization currently managing 340 properties with an estimated value of $1.2 billion.

Limited partnership units are priced at $1,000 and the minimum subscription is $5,000 (5 units).

New Post for Getty

EDMONTON (CP) — Former energy minister Don Getty has been appointed a government director of Alberta Gas Trunk Line Co. Ltd. (AGTL), the government has announced.

Last week, Getty was given a consulting contract with the energy department to the end of this year.

AGTL has 15 directors — four appointed by the government. AGTL heads the Foothills Pipe Lines consortium sponsoring the Canadian portion of the Alaska Highway pipeline project.

Getty's fee for the consulting contract and remuneration as an AGTL director until 1983 were not disclosed.

4 Million Barrel Target

TEHRAN (AP) — The National Iranian Oil Co. (NIOC) says production of Iranian crude oil will average 3.5 million to four million barrels a day for the rest of the year, with a total of 1.05 million barrels going to Exxon, Texaco, Gulf, Caltex and Shell daily.

Reza Azimi, NIOC's marketing director, told a news conference nine-month contracts have been agreed on with about 35 countries and oil companies. He said the price was $16.57 a barrel for light crude and $16.04 for heavy crude.

Azimi said all the buyers agreed not to sell any of the oil to South Africa or Israel.

Before the revolution that drove Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi from the throne, Iran produced an average of six million barrels of crude oil daily and exported 5.3 million.

The head of NIOC, Hassan Nazih, told the news conference the government is limiting daily production to four million barrels for the time being, and no foreign personnel will be needed to maintain that.

"We at this time do not need any foreign personnel at any level," he declared.

Before the revolution, about 600 foreign technicians were employed in the industry by the Oil Services Co. (OSCO), which was owned by 17 foreign oil companies and produced and marketed most of Iran's oil for the national comapny.

"OSCO is finished," said Nazih.

Azimi said the company sold oil on the spot market in March for $18.70 to $22.20 a barrel and will continue to sell 200,000 to 300,000 barrels a day on a spot basis.

Industry sources expect Iran's daily oil income to average $48 million to $50 million. Before the revolution, although production was 50 per cent more, it averaged $55 million to $60 million because the price was $3 to $4 a barrel less. That was 90 per cent of the country's foreign income.

Oil Sands Gets Boost

EDMONTON (CP) — Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. announced Thursday approval of an expansion that eventually will increase daily production by 13,000 barrels of synthetic crude oil at the firm's Fort McMurray, Alta., plant.

"We've been chasing the expansion rainbow for many, many moons," company president Stanley Cowtan told a news conference before making the anouncement at Great Canadian's annual meeting.

In another development, Cowtan said a shareholders' vote would be held later on a proposed amalgamation between GCOS and Sun Oil Company Ltd., a company that now owns more than 95 per cent of Great Canadian shares.

The expansion, which Cowtan said was approved by the Alberta government in early April, is a modified version of original plans last year to increase production from almost 45,000 barrels a day to 65,000 barrels.

Cowtan said the original proposal would have cost about $250 million, "far exceeding the funds that the . . . board of directors could prudently commit."

At that time it was believed higher prices for the plant's product were necessary. While the Syncrude Canada Ltd. Fort McMurray plant was getting world price for its synthetic crude, Great Canadian was paid the lower domestic Canadian price.

Last fall, Ottawa assured Great Canadian that it would receive world prices on approval of its expansion plans.

Also, the Alberta government had indicated the provincial royalty rate on expanded production would be about the same as the present average rate.

"Their assurances made the expansion project possible," Cowtan told shareholders.

The company president said Great Canadian's oil now fetches slightly more than $13 a barrel. World prices would take that figure up to about $19 a barrel.

By 1982, Cowtan said, expansion should be complete.

The additions include a new bucket excavator and a new production line in the actual extraction plant.

So far, $4 million in initial engineering and staffing has been spent.

Cowtan told shareholders the firm had a profit in 1978 of $19 million on revenues of $213 million and its accumulated deficit stood at $35 million, down from $54 million.

For the first three months of 1979, the company reported a profit of $7,222,000. That was up from $5,053,000 for the same period in 1978.

Production was lower than anticipated in 1978 because of a 39-day strike, difficulties in processing units, higher operating and overburden removal costs and provincial royalties.

The plant has been operating for 12 years and Cowtan said he expected it would continue production at its current lease for another 20 years, even with the expansion.

TIME SHARING

(A GREAT IDEA — THAT SAVES YOU MONEY)

FACT! WITH TIME SHARING OWNERSHIP YOU CAN HAVE A HAWAIIAN VACATION FOR $4.00 PER DAY

SOUNDS INCREDIBLE BUT IT'S TRUE

HOW DOES IT WORK?

A one time purchase — $1,500* (1 week) you can own your own fully furnished, fully maintained 2 bedroom vacation home in B.C. A small additional fee entitles you to trade your 1 week time share for your choice of over 200 resort locations throughout the world.

TIME SHARING

Is one of the hottest vacation opportunities on the market today . . . a major attraction being that a buyer can own a vacation home without a large capital investment — You purchase only those weeks required for your vacation — One, Two, Three, Four or more.

IMPORTANT FEATURES:

- Exchange Privileges in over 200 Resorts World/Wide.
- Canadian Management with Strata Council now in operation.
- As a Member you control all maintenance expenditures.
- Canadian Time Share Ownership protects you under Canadian Law.
- All transactions in Canadian Funds.

Technology, Me-Society Changing Newspapers

TORONTO (CP) — Technological advances and the "me-society" that emerged from the turbulent 1960s and early 1970s have spawned a dramatic change in newspapers — a change that Martin Goodman believes is only just beginning.

A veteran journalist who has chronicled the events of a changing world for more than two decades, Goodman is the new president of The Canadian Press, the co-operative news-gathering and distributing association of Canadian daily newspapers.

"Newspapers have had to change quite dramatically in the way they appear to readers," Goodman said during an interview in the spacious office he occupies as president of Toronto Star Newspapers Ltd.

He talks about an old contract that existed between editors and readers — when editors decided what was news, packaged it and put it before the public.

"The contract has changed. The editor tells national and international news, but the reader decides what's local news."

Radio and television have replaced newspapers as the first harbingers of news, leaving the dailies and weeklies to confirm that something has happened and to expand upon it, said Goodman.

"Newspapers can provide inspection and analysis, depth and background about a subject matter that affects people in society. It's a substantial change in the historic role (of newspapers)."

The real transition, he said, is to provide accounts that let readers define their own needs and wants.

"That's just starting. We have a long way to go."

Goodman said the changes do not diminish the fundamental role of The Canadian Press to provide hard news. But lifestyles are becoming important in the daily news report as the emphasis shifts from the what to the why.

"CP has a crucial role as a national lifeline that no newspaper or group of newspapers has provided. It's one of the very few institutions that allows people across Canada to share and participate. They share information about themselves."

Goodman, 44, has been sharing information with Canadians for 23 years — from the reports he filed from the U.S. South during the racial crisis of the early '60s to the role he played in covering the involvement of German playgirl Gerda Munsinger with ministers of the Diefenbaker government.

Born in Calgary and raised in Montreal, Goodman joined The Star in 1958 after year-long stints with The Calgary Herald and then The Canadian Press.

Little did he know he would become CP's youngest president when he left the news agency to embark on his career at The Star — a career that saw him serve as the newspaper's Washington correspondent, as the chief of its Ottawa bureau, its city editor, managing editor, editor-in-chief and president.

Along the way he spent a year, in 1961, as a Nieman Fellow at Harvard University in Cambridge, Mass., a coveted journalism honor.

Goodman, who holds degrees from McGill University in Montreal and Columbia University in New York, said the public appetite for foreign news has waned with the emergence of the "me-revolution, the me-syndrome."

Newspapers now face greater demands for lifestyles and entertainment reports as the competition to capture the public's time increases.

Bringing insights and perspectives has taken on a larger role and broadened the base for Canadians to make their decisions, said Goodman.

"Newspapers are generally weak in their ability to cover complicated economic and financial stories," he said when asked to outline the weak points of the news business.

The wire service and newspapers, he added, still are struggling to come to grips with the stopping point between hard and soft news.

"An example is the arrival of the automobile. It happened 50 years ago. One thing occurring now is the total integration of the Canadian and U.S. economy. It's not authorized by Parliament, it's not being raised in this election campaign . . . "In other words, it's not happening at 11 a.m. on Friday. We have to deal with stories that are topical and relevant but are not occurring at a specific time. The things that are trends rather than events are more difficult."

Office Space Boom

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary is growing so fast it will overtake Vancouver in total office space by the end of the year, says a Calgary developer.

"We'll have 15 million square feet of prime office space Calgary this year and that's one million more than Vancouver has," Hermann Bessert, vice-president of the Cascade Development Corp. Ltd., said.

"And, we've got two million square feet coming in 1980 and 1.5 million more in 1981. What's more, we can fill the space. Vancouver can't."

Bessert was speaking in an interview before a ceremony marking the completion of a new 32-storey office tower whose tenants will include the Alberta stock exchange.

Grim Year Seen For Construction

OTTAWA (CP) — The construction industry faces its worst year in a quarter of a century, says William Nevins, chief economist for the Canadian Construction Association.

In a 1979 forecast released this week, Nevins predicts employment in the industry will drop by 5,000 persons this year. This compares with a 1978 decline of 2,000 workers.

He said in an interview his association has been compiling figures since the mid-1950s and there is nothing in the record to match the dismal outlook for the current year.

The full impact of the projected shrinking of the construction work force will not be evident in the industry's unemployment rate, he said, because many workers will be forced to look for jobs in other fields.

The provinces expected to suffer most are Quebec, with a predicted 11-per-cent drop in construction employment, Manitoba 7.5 per cent, Saskatchewan 4.5 per cent, Nova Scotia two per cent and Ontario 1.5 per cent.

These declines will be partly offset by increasing employment in Alberta, up 13.5 per cent, New Brunswick up 13.5 per cent, Newfoundland, up 9.5 per cent and British Columbia up three per cent.

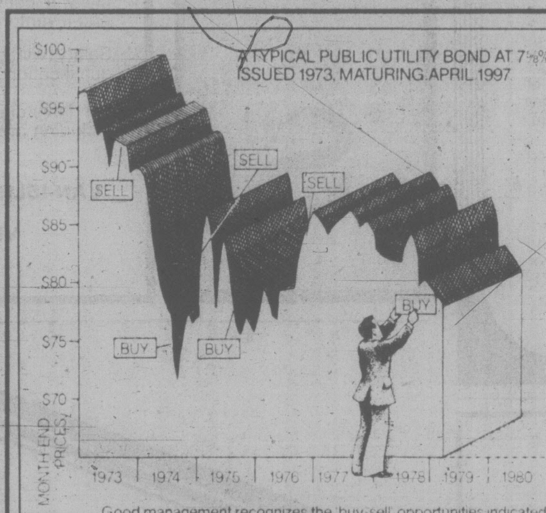
A NEW BOND FUND FROM INVESTORS

High yield. Stability. And the potential of capital gain from professional management in the multi-billion dollar bond market.



Good management recognizes the 'buy-sell' opportunities indicated in the above chart and positions the Fund to anticipate the change. Hindsight says our manager was right about the 'buy-sell' periods in this bond. But it was foresight that created the profit out of these situations.

A Bond Fund for individuals and corporations.

The new Investors Bond Fund will create a large pool of money, to be invested in the Canadian bond market and managed by a team of senior professionals. It's a volatile market, alive with trading...and you can participate in it with an initial investment as low as $500.

Bonds: Canada's most common way to raise capital.

In 1978, new bond issues amounted to $15,700,000,000. The bond market in Canada totals $167,000,000,000, borrowed by governments and corporations to finance their expenditures.

Why invest in bonds?

Bonds are one of the more secure forms of investment. They represent an absolute commitment by the issuing government or corporation to pay a certain rate of interest and to return the face value of capital within a specified time.

They can be converted to cash and are highly respected as collateral.

A market alive with opportunity.

To the aware, the bond market is a trader's market. Because the market value of bonds reacts to shifts in interest rates, any change has a significant impact on bond prices. Our management team believes such a shift is imminent. The opportunity, therefore, for significant gains in the short term suggests the timing for participation in this fund is right.

How the professionals manage $billions in the market.

- They are plugged into the significant economic trends.
- They know when to trade.
- They know what to trade.
- When to hedge against rising interest rates with short-term bonds and deposits.
- When to take advantage of declining rates with long-term bonds.

There are surprisingly few professional bond managers in Canada. Among them are the members of the top management team who run the new Investors Bond Fund.

Investors Bond Fund: participate for as little as $500.

Investors Bond Fund applies the mutual fund concept to the bond market. The Fund will create a large pool of money, under professional management, in which you can participate by buying Fund units.

If your investment is applied to a Registered Retirement Plan, the minimum is $500. If your investment is unregistered, the minimum is $1000. Additional investments can be made for as little as $50.

All the details are in the Fund's Prospectus.

Talk to Investors.

Investors Bond Fund could be right for you if you are (1) looking for a regular cash income to meet current needs, (2) seeking a moderate capital gain, (3) interested in compounding investment to meet future needs, or (4) balancing your investments.

INVESTORS BOND FUND

1. High yield.
2. Liquidity–twice a month valuation permits conversion to cash on request.
3. Capital growth potential.
4. Protection from declining interest rates because of capital growth potential.
5. Cash income paid quarterly or monthly.
6. Automatic reinvestment in Fund units provides compounding.
7. Realized capital gains distributed annually.
8. Can be a Registered Retirement Plan.

The Fund offers a relatively secure investment with some potential for capital growth–an interesting position for the conservative investor.

The professional planners at Investors will give you all the time it takes to understand the Fund fully. Please call.

April Sales Up For AMC

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — American Motors (Canada) Ltd. reported Thursday that April car sales of 2,617 topped the 2,610 sold in April of last year.

Ronald Hogue, director of sales, attributed the improvement to strong sales in Quebec and the Atlantic provinces.

The company sold 759 Jeeps in April, surpassing by 15 per cent the April record of 660 set last year.

$300M-Price Fix Payment

HOUSTON (Reuter) — Producers of corrugated cardboard boxes agreed to pay almost $300 million to settle a class action suit brought by their customers over alleged price fixing, court records show.

The settlements were reached over several months beginning last July. But they were ordered sealed by a federal judge pending the outcome of a criminal trial involving two of the 22 companies and seven individuals named in the civil suits.

All nine defendants were acquitted of criminal price fixing charges Monday, clearing the way for release of details of the civil settlements.

The court will announce May 16 whether it will give preliminary approval to the proposed settlements.

Among the larger settlements in the case are: the Continental Group, $27.4 million; Weyerhauser, $39.2 million; Inland Container, $34.2 millon; Container Corp. of America, $34.2 million; Champion International, $24.1 million; and Willamette Industries, $11.3 million.

Mead Corp., a defendant in the criminal case along with Continental Group, did not agree to a settlement.

Sulphur Tower A First

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — Construction should start this month on North America's first sulphur prilling tower, a spokesman for the project's builder says.

The 200-foot tower will produce hard beads by spraying molten sulphur from its top, the spokesman for Partec Lavalin Inc. said. The sulphur would cool rapidly as it fell to the ground.

The process makes it easier to handle sulphur. Sulphur prills produce a minimum of dust and pose little hazard to workers loading and unloading.

The tower will be built at the Srachan gas plant 28 kilometres southwest of Rocky Mountain House. The plant is owned by Gulf Canada Resources Inc.

The project is to be completed by the end of November.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEER

$6.3 Million Invested by CFDC

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Film Development Corporation (CFDC) last year invested $6.3 million in 30 feature film productions ranging from high adventure to tender love stories.

Executive director Michael McCabe said in a statement the federal agency also invested $900,000 in 56 film projects at the pre-production or development stages. This represents an increase from 1977, when $400,000 was invested in 40 projects.

Last year's feature films — 18 English, 12 French — had combined budgets totalling $50 million, compared with investments of $1.6 million in 1977 in 20 productions with total budgets of $5.5 million.

McCabe said the CFDC last year emphasized investment in films with international appeal.

"If it takes stories with wide appeal and international stars to reach screens around the world, then that's what we'll invest in," McCabe said.

Among the international stars who worked in Canada last year were David Niven, Michael Douglas, Ava Gardner, Catherine Deneuve and Tony Curtis.

Announcing:

The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon.

Protection for your new home investment.

The New Home Warranty Program of British Columbia and the Yukon was initiated by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, B.C. Council and was established in April, 1976.

It's a nice warm feeling ....

The Warranty means protection for you and your investment in a new home, five kinds of protection for five years from the date of purchase.

- Your deposit (money you paid in good faith to bind the contract) to the registered builder is protected, up to $5,000.
- Registered builders provide a one year workmanship and materials warranty, which is guaranteed by the Program.
- You are protected against structural defects in your new home to the end of the fifth year from date of occupancy, up to $20,000.
- In the event of a dispute with your builder, the Program provides impartial conciliation to help you resolve your differences.
- And, if you decide to sell your new home during the five year period, the balance of the warranty is transferable to the new owner.

Today, there are over 10,000 new homes in B.C. and the Yukon protected by the New Home Warranty Program. Look for this sign when buying your new home.

FIVE YEAR WARRANTY

Judges Ruling Makes Brascan Case More Tangled

NEW YORK (AP) — The corporate fight involving F. W. Woolworth and two Canadian companies became more entangled Thursday when a federal judge allowed Edper Equities Ltd. of Montreal to pay for 6.6 million shares of Toronto-based Brascan Ltd. stock purchased earlier this week.

Woolworth is fighting Brascan's efforts to buy control of the large retailer. And Brascan is fighting Edper's attempts to increase its holdings in Brascan. Edper wants to keep Brascan from buying the giant retailer.

U.S. District Judge Pierre Leval lifted part of a court order freezing Edper's purchase of 6.6 million shares of Brascan. That allows Edper to pay about $150 million for the stock. Officials of the New York and American stock exchanges had told Leval that blocking payment for the 6.6 million shares would disrupt financial markets.

Meanwhile in Washington, the Securities and Exchange Commission ordered a 10-day suspension in trading of Brascan stock because of the confusion over the status of Edper's purchases of Brascan.

And in New Orleans a federal judge ruled Louisiana's law governing corporate takeovers is unconstitutional, thereby removing one obstacle to Brascan's effort to acquire Woolworth.

U.S. District Judge Jack Gordon, ruling on a suit filed against the state by Brascan, said the state law conflicts with federal securities statutes.

Brascan is offering $35 a share, or a total of $1.13 billion, in an effort to acquire the retailer. But besides fighting opposition from Woolworth management Brascan is being forced to contend with opposition from Edper, its largest shareholder.

Edper has acquired 31 per cent of Brascan's shares and is seeking a stockholders meeting to block the bid for Woolworth.

BECKY LITTLE 477-4424

Jury: Manor Needs Tighter Admissions

A coroner's jury Thursday night recommended tighter restrictions in admitting patients to Oak Bay Manor.

The jury, inquiring into the death of Millicent Steele, 92, said it felt the woman needed closer attention in "something other than what we regard as a rest home."

Mrs. Steele was one of two women who died Easter morning after falling out of their beds while wearing restraining jackets.

The jury, however, ruled the death was caused by natural causes and attached no blame.

On Monday, another jury concluded the other patient, Florence Scarth, 95, had died accidentally and also attached no blame.

W. B. White, counsel for D. B. Cook Corp, owners of the manor, took exception to the Steele jury's recommendation and said it contradicted the finding of natural death.

He said he feared the possible headlines in the papers as result of the jury's ruling.

But jury foreman Helen Haslam replied the jury wasn't concerned so much with the headlines the recommendation makes as she was about trying to avoid "seeing headlines like that a month from now."

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said he could see no inconsistency in the jury's findings.

Meanwhile, a five-member committee appointed by Attorney-General Garde Gardom on Tuesday is expected to begin an investigation into the operation of the manor next week. A report on its findings will be presented to the May 16 meeting of the Provincial Adult Care Facilities Licensing Board.

Victoria NDP candidates Gordon Hanson and Charles Barber are skeptical of the outcome.

Hansen said Thursday the committee members are by and large the same group who granted the manor its nursing care licence in the first place.

Church Camp Program Set

There will be something for practically everyone this summer at the George Pringle Memorial Camps at Shawnigan Lake.

The camps' programs, sponsored by the United Council of Churches, begin May 25 with a three-day leadership development course.

The course will be repeated July 3 to 5.

Regular camps for girls and boys aged nine to 13 will be held between July 7 to 28, with a special off-camp canoe and hiking trip for boys 14 to 16 from July 14 to 21.

For the first time camps for small families will be offered from July 19 to Aug. 13. Leaders and baby-sitters will be there to take care of children while parents take part in adult programs.

The final camp of the summer, from Aug. 13 to 18, will be for adults only.

Camp activities include chapel, Bible study, sing-songs, skits, swimming, hiking, camp-outs, crafts, archery, sailing and canoeing.

Water activities are supervised by qualified life guards.

Further information may be obtained by writing to Mrs. J. Sharpe, registrar, 4280 Gordon Head Road, Victoria V8M 3Y3.

Anyone interested in being a leader or nurse at any of the camps should contact Mrs. Diane Murton at 385-0127.

Extend Life Of Lagoon?

The Capital Regional Board Board will consider spending $5,000 on expansion of the sewage lagoon on Millstream Road to avoid immediately building a controversial septic tank dumping station on Helmcken Road.

Chief regional engineer Norman Howard told regional directors his department has re-assessed the Millstream site and the life of the present lagoon could be extended by building a new lagoon alongside.

Howard said he is confident the Pollution Control Branch will grant a permit for continued operation of the Millstream dump if the new lagoon is constructed.

It would only be used if the liquid level in the present lagoon exceeded a predetermined critical height.

Howard said the dykes had been examined and are in good shape.

At a recent public hearing View Royal residents turned out en masse to protest against the building of a new septic tank dumping station.

Barge rests upside-down on freighter Chavez in Saanich Inlet where it flipped in freak accident

Barge Flips On to Ship

Ocean Cement Ltd. has chartered two tugs and other heavy equipment to try and pull a barge off the port side deck of a freighter in Saanich Inlet.

The freighter's bulwark was mangled when the barge flipped over and landed on top of the ship in a freak mishap Thursday.

No one was injured.

The Chavez was anchored in Indian Bay at the time of the mishap, unloading gypsum through a large blower into the unmanned barge.

The Chavez had brought the gypsum, is used in the making of cement, from Mexico.

The Ocean Cement tug Evco Spray was standing by to tow the load to the B.C. Cement Co. Ltd. plant at Bamberton.

Former naval officer Frank Moxam and his wife Betty were out fishing in their 26-foot power cruiser Ree Dee Dee and were nearby when the barge tipped over about noon.

They said the Chavez had been offloading for about three hours.

"They were using a sort of super blower that was sucking the cargo out of the hold and blowing it onto the barge," Moxam said.

Moxam said he had just remarked to his wife that the barge appeared to be overloaded when it lifted on the inward side, went halfway under the water, popped back out and ended up upside down on the Chavez.

Moxam said he listened on his ship's radio and could hear the Chavez trying to contact a marine surveyor and other officials without much success because it was lunchtime.

Steve Roik, manager of the company's marine division in Vancouver, said the tugs will be used to try and pull the barge free.

Environment Canada officials said there should be little or no damage to the environment because gypsum is an inert rock substance.

Before the Judge

A 21-year-old Duncan man was fined and jailed Thursday after pleading guilty in Victoria provincial court to two charges.

Robert Clive Ripka, charged with impaired driving and driving while suspended, was fined $400 on the first count by Judge William Ostler and sentenced to seven days in jail for the second count.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang told the court Ripka was spotted near Savory heading north on the Island Highway at about 1 a.m. April 3. After noticing Ripka's vehicle pass another travelling in the same direction by going over a double-solid line, Colwood RCMP started chasing him. Ripka passed another car on a double-solid line, and the chase reached speeds of 95 to 100 km/h in an 80 km/h zone before Ripka stopped, Lang said.

Officers also spotted what appeared to be beer bottles being thrown out of Ripka's vehicle during the chase, Lang said.

When officers checked his record through the Canadian Police Information Centre, they discovered he was suspended from driving in B.C. and Alberta.

Ripka was convicted of driving while suspended in Victoria on Dec. 10, 1978, and fined $150 on that occasion, Lang said.

A 17-year-old Saanich youth was fined $200, placed on probation and ordered to perform 100 hours of community service work for going on a destructive rampage Alpril 12.

Wayne Alexander Wright, 4277 Glanford, pleaded guilty to two counts of mischief causing wilful damage.

Lang said Wright went along Burnside West pulling down stops signs and private mailboxes about 12:30 a.m. before being caught by Saanich police.

Ostler fined Wright $100 on each count, placed him on six months probation and added the community service work.

Two young men charged with a break-in at a doctor's office were denied bail by Ostler.

Kenneth Glen Millman, 17, of 3013 Richmond, and David Morberg, 23, of 547 Esquimalt, are charged with breaking and entering 1024 Pandora.

They were remanded in custody until Monday for election of their trial method.

Two Found Guilty In Drug Store Theft

Two men were found guilty in county court Thursday of burglary, theft and possession of more than $200 worth of drugs from a Sidney pharmacy.

Judge D.G. Melvin convicted Trevor Patrick Clanton, 22, and Ian David Ramage, 25, on a joint charge of two counts: breaking, entering and theft at City Pharmacy Ltd.; and possession of stolen drugs and other goods last Nov. 24.

He ordered that a conviction be registered only for the first count, and that a presentence report be prepared for Ramage before sentencing both men June 6 at 10 a.m.

The judge noted the accused were identified by a woman who saw them outside the pharmacy at about 11 p.m. Nov. 23. She thought they acted suspiciously.

A few hours later at about 2:40 a.m. police discovered the break-in and an empty narcotics cabinet at City Pharmacy.

And at 6 p.m. that day they went to a house on Alder in Victoria, where they arrested Ramage and found a syringe and morphine. A plastic garbage bag containing a suitcase full of medicines was found hidden outside between a shed and fence.

A fingerprint identified as Ramage's was found on one of the medicine bottles.

When Clanton was interviewed by police he had a fresh needle mark on his arm and when he was taken into custody he tried to discard a balloon containing some pills which evidence showed had come from the store.

Melvin said he was satisifed the evidence was consistent with guilt and not consistent with any other rational explanation.

He allowed Ramage to remain on bail set previously until sentence is passed.

Dry Weather Increasing Forest Fires

Warm, dry weather sparked 103 new fires in B.C. forests last week, bringing the year's total to 185 compared with 56 for the corresponding 1978 period, the ministry of forests reported Thursday.

There were 76 fires still burning, including 30 in the Cariboo region and 22 in the Kamloops region where tinder-dry grass was creating a hazard, the ministry said.

Explosion Rattles Vic West Residents

A loud blast shook the Victoria West area Thursday night when a tape-recorder rigged with an explosive device blew up in the 600-block Pine about 10 p.m.

Police found pieces of the recorder strewn across the street and a strong smell of black powder hanging over the area.

Officers picked up the pieces and turned them over to their identification unit for examination.

"It's all a little bit of a mystery," a spokesman said today.

Atlantic Battle Rites Set

A Battle of the Atlantic commemorative service will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday at CFB Esquimalt on the lawns in front of the officers' mess on Colville Road.

The interfaith service will recall the 24 Royal Canadian Navy warships and 2,709 Canadians lost on convoy duty in the Atlantic during the Second World War.

The service is open to the public.

Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander maritime forces Pacific, will read the lesson and the honor roll of ships will be read by Capt. Colin Shaw, base commander of CFB Esquimalt.

The destroyer HMCS Saskatchewan moved into the Inner Harbor today and will remain there until Monday.

She will be open to the public from 1 to 4:30 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Commemorative services will be held across Canada on Sunday, involving naval veterans, the Canadian armed forces, Royal Canadian Sea Cadets, members of the merchant marine and civilians.

From a modest forces of 11 warships and 3,600 members of the regular and reserve forces in 1939 the RCN, at its peak point, grew to 400 warships and 95,000 serving men and women during the Second World War. It was the Allies' third largest force.

The RCN's convoy record was 25,342 merchant ships involving a total cargo of 200 million tons.

MB REPORTS: The third in a series of five.

Our roots are deep in British Columbia

In the current five-year period (1978-82), MacMillan Bloedel is investing an extra $700 million in B.C. mills, logging equipment, transportation equipment to make us able to produce more efficiently, to deliver better products for B.C.'s huge international markets. These investments will help make each worker able to produce more, keep us competitive in the world, make B.C. jobs more secure. MacMillan Bloedel's business is international; our roots are in B.C.

We are building a brand-new, $163 million newsprint machine at Powell River. We're rebuilding four other newsprint machines in B.C. to increase production and improve paper quality at a cost of $32.7 million.

Our new self-propelled log barge, the HAIDA BRAVE, was built in Victoria at a cost of $13 million. It eliminates losses through logs sinking. Each of its cranes can pick up 40-ton bundles of logs (about the weight of 35 Datsuns). At Port Alberni, we're spending more than $73 million to build a new sawmill and modernize our own plywood plant.

These are just some of many hundreds of improvements MacMillan Bloedel is making to keep our products competitive in tough world markets.

We are an independent B.C. company, putting capital to work in this province, where our roots are. Our mills, plantations and production in other provinces and countries bring income to B.C.

The HAIDA BRAVE is just one of hundreds of investments MacMillan Bloedel is making in B.C. Total: $700 million by 1982.

If you have a question or would like to know what we have told shareholders about MacMillan Bloedel's investments, profit, plans, write for a copy of our latest annual report to MB REPORTS,

Beggars, Keep It Clean, Polite

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Being a beggar is one thing but please, bums, be polite because you might end up in the slammer.

That's the message to the city's down-and-outs from Victoria council's legal committee.

The committee decided Thursday against a proposed anti-begging bylaw after hearing city solicitor Jacob de Villiers report such a law might be difficult to enforce.

He said if council did want a bylaw it should keep it simple. Appropriate wording would be: "No person may beg."

Then it would be up to the courts to decide if a particular incident constituted begging.

Committee members weren't taken with that idea, and Ald. Bill Tindall said it would be a costly business dragging people into court and trying to prove they were guilty of begging.

"I've had some very eminent people come up and ask me for a dime to feed their parking meter and I'm not sure if that's begging or not," agreed Mayor Mike Young, a lawyer.

"I don't know what we're getting excited about; I don't detect any problem and I get around the streets," offered Ald. Larry Ryan.

Ald. Robin Blencoe said people complaining about beggars were probably overreacting because destitute people often dress in an unappealing manner.

But Ald. Murrary Glazier, who prompted the whole discussion, said panhandlers are a serious problem and something has to be done.

Glazier said there have been some frightening incidents on the streets where beggars have bothered and scared old people.

"Very definitely people are being harassed on the streets," said the alderman.

De Villiers pointed out that under the Criminal Code police officers already have the power to charge anyone who obstructs or molests people in a public place.

The code also deals with drunkenness, fighting, screaming, shouting, swearing, impeding people or loitering in public places.

"If a person comes and hassles someone by begging (he can be charged) . . . but if he politely asks you for money he's not obstructing (and can't be charged)," said de Villiers.

After hearing that, Glazier agreed that existing laws are probably adequate to deal with problem beggars.

He said he wasn't out to get all panhandlers, just the nuisances.

"A man in the square on a sunny day with his hat at his feet is not causing an interference," said Glazier.

Committee members agreed that polite beggars aren't a problem and decided to drop the bylaw idea.

So if bums don't yell, scream, swear, or molest people they can still ask that age old question: "Buddy, can you spare a dime?"

And those who want to be extra cautious can add one more thing: "Please."

Breather on Parking

A 15-minute breather for all cars parked in metered lots in the city was introduced in bylaw amendments approved Thursday.

Victoria's downtown economic development committee voted unanimously to support several changes, including one that forbids tow truck drivers from impounding cars unless a leeway period has been allowed after the ticket expiry time.

Under the amended bylaw towing company operators will also be required to provide city police with a daily list of vehicles taken into custody.

Other changes call for the posting of all lots operated by towing companies and a ban on towing from any lot that fails to have a ticket that dispenses tickets in duplicate.

The city's bylaw governing parking lots and towing companies recently came under review because of numerous complaints from the public about the way their vehicles were impounded.

Anti-Spray Fight Stepped Up

A grass-roots movement to stop city parks crews from continuing to use the controversial herbicide 2,4-D is growing in James Bay.

James Bay Residents' League spokesman Charles Ball said Thursday residents are organizing a petition and public meeting to protest the spraying plan.

City council recently approved the continued use of 2,4-D which is the main weapon parks crews use against dandelions and other weeds.

Ball said the JBRL's action line has been busy with calls from people concerned about the city's plan to use the herbicide on parks and boulevards.

"There's been a very strong reaction to that (council) decision . . . people are dead against it. They consider it a threat to their health."

IMPORT AUTO SHOW

Now Hank Snow Going Disco

TORONTO (CP) — The country and western purists were miffed when Dolly Parton dabbled in pop and disco. They were aghast when Tanya Tucker tried her hand at rock.

Purists, brace yourselves: Hank Snow is setting his sights on the disco floor.

Only to a point, the country veteran is quick to add. But his new show will indeed mark a broadening of his style to accommodate a younger market.

Snow, a native of Brooklyn, N.S., admits that after 43 years in the recording industry he must give in to the styles of the day. It's a question of economics.

"You've got to sell records," he says. "If I wasn't to change I wouldn't sell, it's that plain and simple.

"We'll follow the trends, up the beat, but we'll keep it country."

Helping Snow narrow the musical generation gap will be his protege — a young southern belle named Kelly Foxton. She approached Snow about a year ago when he was taping in Nashville, and expressed her desire to sing professionally.

His reply? A routine "send me a tape."

Snow received the tape, and now recalls his amazement on listening to it.

"RCA wanted me to come up with another duet album (his last one was 15 years ago with Anita Kerr) but I could never find someone, of the numerous girls we tested in the studio, who could phrase with me. I have a very unusual manner of phrasing, both vocally and instrumentally.

"But Kelly was remarkable. She is about as close as I could get."

Snow is convinced that his new discovery will have much to offer his live show as well as on record. They are scheduled to enter the studio this summer.

Quebec Native To Host Loto TV Fare

MONTREAL (CP) — In an act that would impress any juggler, Winston McQuade will soon act as host in two national television series simultaneously — one in French and one in English.

The delicate balancing act is not prompted by a mid-election plea for national unity but by a desire to promote gambling.

On Sunday, McQuade will play host to the first shows in the new Loto Canada series.

Loto Canada is contributing $1.8 million to the annual budget and CBC-TV is adding $1 million to prepare what the producers say is the network's most ambitious variety series.

Not only will Canada's top variety performers appear while $5 million to $17 million in prizes are given out, but McQuade will act as host in two hour-long shows — one in English, one in French — simultaneously.

The monthly shows will be produced across Canada. When a show originates in an English-language city, one show will be live, in English, while the French version will be pre-taped. When the show is in Quebec, the French program will be live, the English one taped.

When producer Richard Nielsen of Nielsen-Ferns won the contract for the series his main intention was to get away from the tradition of having two hosts, one French and one English.

After selling Loto Canada on the idea of the show, to be called Feelin' Like A Million or Vas-y Pour Le Million, he went looking for a bilingual host.

He came to Montreal to see McQuade, who is host of a daily TV show, and offered him the spot.

McQuade, 35, was brought up in Quebec City. His ancestors came from Ireland and was named after Winston Churchill, who visited Quebec City just a few days after McQuade's birth.

Two years ago he was asked to sing on a variety show, so he wrote a song, Salut Le Monde. A recording of it sold 20,000 copies and the network gave him his own daily show.

On each segment of his daily TV show, L'Heure De Pointe, McQuade opens with a song then interviews his guests.

Medallion Event Promises Great Things

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

For those music fans who have a special appreciation for fine piano performance, this evening's major event in the closing stages of the Victoria Music Festival should be a real attraction.

It's the wind-up of two weeks of exceptional keyboard work; the championship classes ending with a flourish as three greatly gifted young artists vie for the Victoria City Medallion.

The event takes place in First United Church Fellowship Hall on Balmoral, starting at 8 p.m. In each of the four categories, three pianists have been chosen to appear.

In the junior category, Denise Oliver, Meris Williams and Michelle Himick have been chosen; in the intermediate, Cary Chow, Eve Egoyan and Timothy Williams, and in the senior, Theresa Lowe, Robert Tweten and Melinda Cownden.

In the open class competition for the medallion, the three top-ranking pianists are Monica Pfau, Claude McLean and Arthur LaVertu.

And there is a bonus. Robert Holliston who received a glowing adjudication to win the professional standard open performance class, will make a guest appearance to play one of the numbers from his concert group.

Other festival sessions continuing through tonight and Saturday include brass and woodwinds with jazz, combo or stage bands competing at Lansdowne tonight and woodwind solos, duets and ensembles Saturday at Christ Church Cathedral Hall.

String sessions are the only others to occupy the two final competitive days. Tonight at Oak Bay Junior its elementary schools string groups and Saturday at First United Hall more violin and cello solo classes and ensemble performance.

Strings adjudicator Thomas Rolston provides strict and detailed criticism which is at the same time consistently constructive and encouraging. The strings champion night comes Saturday in First United Sanctuary starting at 7:30.

The Highlights Concert program is virtually complete and contains such goodies as the CBC prize-winning Cowichan Chorale, a buoyant and musically adroit ensemble; the lovely rainbow ballet, Pas de Classique; performances by the major winners including tenor Richard Margison, and a Hopak danced by the Ukrainian-Canadian Veselka Dancers.

Tickets for the gala finale are selling now at McPherson Playhouse.

More festival results to date:

Hair Backer Guilty

NEW YORK (UPI) — Adela Holzer, the Broadway "angel" who bankrolled the smash musical Hair, Thursday was sentenced to up to six years in jail for swindling investors through phony foreign investment schemes.

State Supreme Court Justice Richard Denzer sentenced Mrs. Holzer to two to six years in jail.

She could have received up to 20 years in prison.

Denzer said the scheme involved investments in a Toyota dealership in Indonesia and real estate in Spain.

Mrs. Holzer's attorney said he would file an appeal.

A jury of six men and six women convicted Mrs. Holzer on March 15 of seven counts of grand larceny by trick.

Mrs. Holzer, 44, was a successful theatrical producer on Broadway in the early 1970s after her $50,000 investment in the hit stage production of Hair snowballed into what she claimed was a $2 million profit.

Her theatrical credits as producer or major backer included such plays as Sleuth, Lenny, The Ritz, Sherlock Holmes, and All Over Town.

Vanessa Skunked

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — Oscar-winning actress Vanessa Redgrave polled only 225 votes in Manchester's Moss Side riding in her bid to win a seat in Britain's House of Commons — and paid for the privilege by losing her $360 deposit.

The fiery movie star and left-wing activist, running on a Workers Revolutionary party (WRP) ticket, trailed last in a four-way contest. Labor candidate George Morton polled 17,765 votes to win by a 4,531-vote margin.

Miss Redgrave's actor brother, Corin, fared even worse than she did. He took only 152 votes in six-way fight for the Lambeth Central riding of South London and also lost his deposit — as did all the 60 candidates fielded by the WRP.

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission
Conseil de la radiodiffusion et des telecommunications canadiennes

Notice of Public Hearing

VANCOUVER, BRITISH COLUMBIA
JUNE 19, 1979, 9:00 A.M.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission will hold a Public Hearing beginning June 19, 1979 at the Sheraton Landmark, 1400 Robson Street, Vancouver, British Columbia to consider the following:

PACIFIC AND NORTHERN REGION

In Decision CRTC 79-77 the Commission approved in part an application by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for renewal of the broadcasting licence for CBUVT Victoria, British Columbia which expired March 31, 1979.

The decision stated that the Commission renewed the licence for CBUVT for a period of one year, from April 1, 1979 to March 31, 1980, to allow the Corporation a reasonable amount of time to resolve its long-term plans for service to Victoria and Vancouver Island.

The decision further stated that the Commission was not prepared to authorize the operation of CBUVT Channel 10, in its present technical configuration, as a rebroadcasting station of CBUT, Vancouver, and therefore it is a condition of licence that CBUVT not commence operating at full power, as approved in Decision CRTC 76-764, until such time as the station's service includes a minium of 7 hours and 10 minutes per week of Victoria and Vancouver Island local production in its schedule.

The decision also noted that the CBC had advised that the establishment of the Victoria studios had been indefinitely postponed, due to budgetary constraints.

At the same time, the commission also noted that it expected the Corporation to proceed as quickly as possible with the provision of rebroadcasting stations of CBUT Vancouver on the Sunshine Coast and that it should also examine the possibility of providing a program feed to the authorized Sooke, British Columbia rebroadcasting station directly from CBUT in the event that the operation of CBUVT is substantially delayed.

In view of the Corporation's statement at the October 24, 1978 Vancouver Public Hearing that it expected that its long-term budget priorities would be established by June 1979, the Commission hereby calls the Corporation to its June 19, 1979 Public Hearing in Vancouver, to provide an opportunity for further discussion on the progress that has been made towards the establishment of CBUVT Victoria and the provision of a distinctive CBC service throughout Vancouver Island.

GENERAL INFORMATION

How to intervene — Anyone wishing to comment on this matter must submit a written intervention which should contain a clear and concise statement of the relevant facts and the grounds upon which the intervener's comments on this matter are based. It should also state whether or not the intervener wishes to appear at the hearing.

Deadline for receipt of interventions at the commission and with the Licensee: May 30, 1979. — To be sent by registered mail or personal delivery to Licensee, 1500 Bronson Avenue, Ottawa, Ontario, K1G 3J5 and CRTC Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0N2 with proof of service. Must be actually received on specified date, not merely posted on this date.

Further information is outlined in Rules of Procedure available for the sum of 35 cents from: The Publishing Centre, Printing Centre, Printing and Publishing, Department of Supply and Services, 270 Albert Street, Ottawa, Ontario. Information: Write to CRTC or phone 819-997-1027 or 997-1328.

PCs Would End Quit-at-65: Clark

FP News Service

ELECTION 79

NAPANEE — A Progressive Conservative government would abolish compulsory age 65 retirement in all fields of federal jurisdiction within the first five years of taking office, leader Joe Clark promised Thursday.

Clark released his party policy for senior citizens during a luncheon address at the local Lion's banquet hall.

In addition to clearing out what he termed the "discrimination" of automatic retirement, the federal Tory leader promised:

—To reverse the existing practice of cutting off the spouse's allowance on the death of a marriage partner.

—To seek provincial agreement to permit Canada Pension Plan contributions by — or on behalf of — spouses who are not employed;

—A tax provision for home-owning senior citizens to allow tax deductions of municipal levies up to $1,000 per year, and;

—To offer the provinces an additional $15 million for home care help for the elderly.

All the problems of old age and retirement are currently under study by a Senate committee in Ottawa. In addition, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau promised last week to work for changes to accomodate spouses not covered by the Canada Pensioon Plan. The New Democratic Party has campaigned for years to improve pension plans and pensioners' rights.

The Progressive Conservative plan would cost an estimated $27 million, Clark said, but party analysts could not estimate the long-term — possibly hidden — costs on such things as indexing or shared contribution pension plans.

"The human rights act and others statutes will be amended to ensure Canadians, able and willing to work past age 65, are protected by law from age discrimination in all fields of federal jurisdiction," he said.

He promised to consult the provinces, unions, the private sector and the Canadian public, to "work out a fair timetable for abolishing compulsory retirement."

The Tories would await the conclusion of the Senate inquiry then draft a white paper for public discussion.

Following outside consultation, a parliamentary committee will examine the bill at public hearings before passage into law.

All this would be done within the first term of his government's election, Clark said.

The Tory chief also said he wanted to end "the very cruel provision in Canadian law which submits people to the double blow of losing a spouse and at the same time, losing the source of income the spouse provided."

At present, when a spouse dies, the partner loses the married person's allowance when the surviving partner is between 60 and 64 years of age.

The most difficult part of the Clark plan to achieve will be the joint agreement with the provinces to permit pension contributions for spouses who are not formally employed.

"This would include spouses working in the home, persons who have left the labor force temporarily to care for children and spouses working in family businesses or farms," he said.

The provinces now use pension funds for investment purposes and, so far, have been reluctant to change the existing system.

During an impromptu interview in a furniture warehouse — earlier in the day — Clark clarified his position on the Quebec sovereignty-association referendum and the differing statements made Wednesday by himself and by Roch LaSalle, one of the two Tory members from Quebec in the last parliament.

When asked if he agreed that the province of Quebec deserved some kind of special status, Clark replied:

"He can make that case in caucus. I don't support constitutional special status. I know that Roch will support special status and will argue with his usual force and eloquence and I will pay heed to his view as I do to the views of others.

"I just don't think the country would accept at this time constitutional special status."

Clark also repeated his claim that the "French face" of a Progressive Conservative government would help convince Quebecers they should stay within the Canadian federal system.

Quebecer Sears PCs

MONTREAL (CP) — Conservative leader Joe Clark may win enough votes in English Canada to form a minority government, but his victory would be meaningless unless he changes his attitude toward Quebec, says Henri Laberge, leader of the Union Populaire.

In a statement issued Thursday, Laberge denounced Clark for maintaining that Quebec cannot vote itself out of Confederation, noting this stand has been contradicted by Roch Lasalle, the Tories' Quebec lieutenant.

Laberge also said it was "indecent" of Clark to deny the right of self-determination for Quebec, since he is "the leader of a party whose founder (John A. Macdonald) allowed the genocide of the Metis of Manitoba, with methods worthy of the Nazis, and the murder of their leader, Louis Riel."

Official Stationary Was Goof: Lang Man

OTTAWA (CP) — A spokesman for Wheat Board Minister Otto Lang said Thursday it was an accident that resulted in a Lang news release attacking NDP Leader Ed Broadbent being issued on official wheat board stationary.

"It was an accident and it won't happen again," the spokesman said after receiving calls about the news release under the wheat board's letterhead dated Wednesday in Saskatoon.

Lang responds in the release to Broadbent's charges this week in Saskatchewan concerning the Liberal government's approach to rail line abandonment.

Broadbent's comments were made during campaigning for the May 22 election and Lang's statement is a Liberal party reply to the charges.

The spokesman said any future campaign statements from Lang would be issued on ordinary stationary bearing no relation to government agencies.

Used Iranian Fighter Jets Good Bet for Canada: MP

A federal Progressive Conservative government would try to buy 78 sophisticated F-14 fighter planes second-hand from Iran for North American air defence, says party defence spokesman, Victoria MP Allan McKinnon.

Clashing with Liberal government policy, McKinnon said Thursday he favors buying used Grumman F-14s for North America and McDonnell Douglas F-18As for Canada's NATO forces. He had been told the Iranian F-14s were available for $10 million to $12 million each.

Defence Minister Barney Danson said in a telephone interview from Toronto he stands by his earlier policy of a single aircraft for Canada's military commitments. Even second-hand, the F-14 would probably be too expensive — operating costs would still be high, Danson said.

The Iranian F-14s have not been offered to Canada, he said.

The F-18A and the cheaper General Dynamics F-16 are finalists in the government's $2.3-billion fighter plane competition. Canada is seeking 130 to 150 fighters for forces in Europe and North America.

The F-16 is considered a strong contender, mainly because of its cheaper basic price.

The F-14 was one of several planes rejected by the government last year in a preliminary round in the fighter competition. Danson said then that the F-14 was an outstanding plane but too expensive.

It is understood U.S. Gen. James Hill recently urged the U.S. defence department to buy back the Iranian F-14s for North American air defence. Hill is commander of the joint U.S.-Canada North American Air Defence Command (NORAD).

McKinnon said he has been told by a reliable source the $10-$12 million price for the Iranian F-14s includes 270 Phoenix missiles and ground-support equipment.

The Phoenix missile is expensive but many military experts say it makes the F-14 the best air interceptor in the world.

While the missile was designed to fit the F-14, there have reports the U.S. government is considering altering the McDonnell Douglas F-15 to carry it, too.

At $10-$12 million each, the 78 Iranian F-14s would cost $780 million to $936 million.

McKinnon said that his source, whom he did not name, believes Canada could also buy 60 of the F-18s and still manage to squeeze within the $2.3-billion program cost set by the Liberal government.

New Shell Super Non-Leaded... try a tankful for smooth running high-octane performance

Car engines today are built to new requirements. So more than ever, the octane level of your fuel could determine how smoothly your engine performs.

That's why Shell is introducing new Shell Super Non-Leaded Gasoline. For cars that require a high-octane non-leaded fuel, new Shell Super Non-Leaded is just the gasoline to move up to. Check out the following high-octane benefits.

This could be the last you'll hear of knock, ping and run-on

Does your car engine knock or ping when you step on the gas? Or run-on after you turn off the key? One way to eliminate them could be to move up to Shell Super Non-Leaded Gasoline. It's specially blended to a high-octane level for smooth running performance.

Available at Shell service stations where you see the Shell Super Non-Leaded sign.

Better mileage? It might be a simple matter of timing

If you've had the timing retarded to get rid of knock or ping, you may also be getting poorer mileage. Up to 5% poorer!

So have the timing reset to manufacturer's specifications. Then fill up with Shell Super Non-Leaded for smooth engine performance and better fuel economy that could save you up to one gallon per tankful.*

*Based on a 20-gallon fuel tank fitted to many North American passenger cars.

If you're now using Shell Super, switch to new Super Non-Leaded for high-octane performance

New Shell Super Non-Leaded delivers the high-octane performance most cars using Super-leaded gasoline need. Also, Shell Super Non-Leaded leaves no lead deposits. So your spark plugs, muffler and tail pipe should last longer.

Drive into your nearest Shell dealer and try a tankful... for good mileage and clean, smooth-running performance.

Trudeau Cheered in Quebec

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

DRUMMONDVILLE, Que. — Prime Minister Trudeau rode in triumph across Eastern Quebec Thursday, attacking the Conservatives, the Creditistes and the Parti Quebecois while large crowds cheered him on.

"At least I can create unity in my own party," Trudeau told a rally of more than 1,000 persons here as he referred to divisions within the Conservatives over how to deal with Quebec.

At least two prominent Quebec Conservatives have publicly broken with leader Joe Clark over whether Quebec has the right to self-determination.

Clark's statement that the people of Quebec cannot vote their way out of Canada has been contested by Tory MP Roch LaSalle and star candidate Andre Payette, both of whom favor negotiating with Quebec after a referendum victory.

"Who would you rather have?" to deal with the PQ government, Trudeau asked as he accused Clark of reversing his stand on the sovereignty-association issue. "Do you want to elect a weak government in Ottawa, controlled by Mr. Roy in support of Mr. Clark?"

Campaigning in the riding of Drummond, where the Creditistes have strong hopes, Trudeau called Creditiste leader Fabien Roy "a separatist."

He said Roy wanted to see a minority government elected "because he doesn't believe in Canada" and wants to weaken it.

Trudeau said Roy is "not a worthy successor to Real Caouette, who believed in a strong Canada."

The Drummond riding is held by the Parti Quebecois on the provincial level and the prime minister used the occasion to blame the PQ government for some of Canada's economic problems, especially investor uncertainty.

But he also used a quote from Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau to show that the Quebec economy is strong.

Parizeau gave credit to the federal government for imposing import quotas on foreign textiles and shoes — important industries in Eastern Quebec.

Meanwhile, the Conservatives are trying to paint the most "pessimistic" picture possible of the economy without proposing any solutions,he said.

Speaking in an important agricultural riding, Trudeau said farm receipts in Quebec went up 34 per cent bettween 1977 and 1978 under his Liberal government and said the exodus from the farms to the cities has been stopped.

Trudeau spent the afternoon mainstreeting in the town of St. Hyacinthe — about 25 miles east of Montreal — where he was mobbed by a crowd of more than 1,000 persons at an outdoor market.

It was a striking contrast to Joe Clark's campaign appearance at the same spot about two weeks ago when less than 100 people turned out.

Earlier in Montreal, Trudeau had lunch for over an hour at the home of Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan, who was elected this week to the Quebec National Assembly.

Food Giant Attacked

ELECTION 79

CALGARY (CP) — Ed Broadbent put in a fruitful day Thursday campaigning for the May 22 federal election — attacking the giant George Weston Ltd. food conglomerate and proposing an Ottawa-Alberta natural gas bank.

With his wife Lucille at his side, Broadbent continued his on-going battle to reduce food prices by suggesting in a Vancouver food co-operative that the government should dismember the Weston organization as one step in bringing down food prices.

Weston, which owns Loblaws, Supervalu and Western Grocers, controls 34 per cent of the retail food market and had 1978 profits 84.2 per cent higher than in 1977.

Broadbent said Weston and three other similar organizations — Dominion Stores Ltd., Steinberg Inc. and Canada Safeway Ltd. — control 71 per cent of all Canadian retail groceries.

He told his impromptu audience a similar situation exists in the wholesale food industry with five giants controlling 82 per cent of the market.

"This kind of market power would not be permitted in many other countries in the world, especially in the U.S. which has much tougher competition laws."

While advocating new, tough legislation to dismantle Weston, Broadbent said existing laws could be used to control the situation now.

He already has promised $100 million to help establish more co-operative retail outlets as a means of forcing down prices if his party forms the government.

He later suggested to 300 enthusiastic supporters that Ottawa and Alberta should get invest together in buying surplus natural gas stock against future shortages, especially in eastern Quebec and the Maritimes.

He said Ottawa should put up $300 million cash with Alberta making its investment by absorbing the cost of storing the surplus.

He said Petro-Canada, the federal oil company, should be expanded to handle administration of the program.

An aide explained later that Alberta had not been approached with the proposal, but thought it would go along with the idea.

Broadbent also attacked a recent National Energy Board decision that natural gas considered surplus should be exported. Because there is no doubt there will be future shortages, he said, there can be no current surplus.

He accused both the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives of "taking the quick-buck philosophy" by supporting the sale of its surplus resources when they will be needed in the future.

Broadbent spends today mainstreeting in Toronto, where he will stay through Saturday.

CLCer Raises Curbs Spectre

EDMONTON (CP) — The executive vice-president of the Canadian Labor Congress said Thursday wage-and-price controls would be reintroduced if either the Liberals or the Progressive Conservatives win a majority in the May 22 federal election.

Julien Major told delegates to the annual convention of the Alberta Federation of Labor that the only sure way to prevent implementation of such controls is to vote for the NDP.

He said election of an NDP government would bring respect for the labor movement in addition to responsible government. Alberta NDP Leader Grant Notley and federation president Harry Kostiuk delivered the same message earlier.

Major attacked the Trudeau government's record and said it was largely responsible for the country's inflation. He also criticized proposed federal cuts in unemployment insurance benefits.

Meanwhile, the 800 delegates unanimously endorsed a policy paper aimed at diffusing pressure for right-to-work legislation in Alberta.

COMPARE THE TAX RATES ACROSS CANADA... AND SEE HOW WELL SOCIAL CREDIT WORKS!

B.C. enjoys the second lowest tax structure of any province in Canada. It's another direct benefit of sound financial management under Social Credit: management which has reduced waste in government spending, and made more money available for the programs people need. Social Credit has also encouraged our resource industries to expand and provide more government revenues. In 3 years of Social Credit, resource revenues have increased by 75%—the result is more of the tax burden paid by corporations and less by the individual taxpayer. Here's the story in detail:

Trudeau's Record Target of Stanfield's 'Last Hurrah'

By PAUL WHITELAW
FP News Service

SYDNEY, N.S. — Robert Stanfield, making the Last Hurrah of his long political career, smiles wryly at the suggestion he is "the best prime minister Canada never had."

It's a comment he's hearing often these days as he stumps the country to help Conservative leader Joe Clark achieve the victory he never won for himself.

But Stanfield modestly brushes aside the praise and says he would probably still be dogged by a loser's image if he were still seeking the nation's top political job.

"When you're in a position where you can't do any harm, so-to-speak, the public becomes more generous," the 65-year-old former Tory leader tells a reporter in a Sydney hotel room.

"That's not surprising," he says, adding he noticed "the same thing" occurred to John Diefenbaker after he was toppled from the Conservative leadership. "People were able to take a more detached view of Mr. Diefenbaker and enjoy him."

But unlike Diefenbaker, Stanfield withdrew voluntarily from political centre-stage in 1976 without a fight and has been a unifying force since then in the frequently fractious Tory party.

On a radio hot-line show in this Cape Breton city, Stanfield tells listeners why he is fighting one last campaign even though he is not seeking re-election to the Commons: "I like Joe Clark. I like the way he has handled things in the party. He's firm and he is an effective leader."

Stanfield, whose wry sense of humor is legend among political insiders but was seldom apparent to the public, is also hoping the May 22 election results will give him the so-called last laugh at Trudeau's expense.

Although Stanfield displays a large degree of sanguinity about his own political misfortunes, there is a new note of uncharacteristic bitterness as he attacks Trudeau's record.

"Pierre Trudeau has done an enormous amount of damage to the credibility of government," he says on the radio show. "I don't know now whether to believe him or not."

Of course, that was a reference to Trudeau's new position of wage-price controls in October 1975. The PM had ridiculed Stanfield's call for controls durng the 1974 election.

Later in the day, Stanfield tells an interviewer at the local TV station his anger over Trudeau's record stems not only from controls but also the "cynical" deal that coaxed Tory Jack Horner to join the Liberals in exchange for a cabinet portfolio.

Stanfield noted that Horner was a staunch opponent of bilingualism, a centre piece of the Liberal's policy.

For the first time publicly, Stanfield confirmed that Trudeau tried on two occasions to persuade him to accept a Senate appointment after he stepped down as Conservative leader.

He said that "officially" the offers were rejected because of his decision "to get out of politics."

"If I sound bitter about Mr. Trudeau," he tells a reporter later in his hotel room, "it's nothing to do with my own career. I feel pretty good about my years in politics, although I don't want to sound smug about it."

But he adds: "I think my attitude toward Mr. Trudeau has changed a good deal since 1974."

Stanfield campaigned this week in his native Nova Scotia, wher he once served as Tory premier, and on Prince Edward Island. He will be lending his prestige to Conservative candidates in Ontario next week.

While Diefenbaker has complained bitterly that Tory organizers have rejected his offers to campaign on behalf of the party outside his Prince Albert riding, Stanfield is taking his message to the country with Clark's blessing.

Of his often-strained dealings with Diefenbaker, he will say merely: "We're not unfriendly, but I don't think he's a friend. We have a correct relationship."

Never a man to engage in rhetorical overkill, Stanfield conceded on the local radio show there is "some risk in making a change of government" and electing an untried leader. But the alternative is "the certainty of a dismal performance by Prime Minister Trudeau."

He credits Trudeau with courage in attempting to promote bilingualism, although he says the PM's rigidity on constitutional change has polarized the people of Quebec."

The former Tory leader is particularly annoyed by what he calls Trudeau's "unprecedented personal attacks" on Clark, and told listeners: "I think it's a very stupid thing for a leader to do, to devote so much attention to his opponent."

Grits Stingy In Que.: Roy

ELECTION 79

ROUYN, Que. (CP) — Quebec has been deprived of $18 billion since 1961 because of inequitable federal government spending practices, Social Credit leader Fabien Roy said Thursday.

Campaigning in this traditional Socred stronghold in northwestern Quebec, Roy took a page from the battle plan of the Parti Quebecois, citing statistics prepared by the provincial government.

He told a news conference two federal departments — regional economic expansion and industry, trade and commerce — were the worst offenders in shortchanging the province. The Queec subsidies and spending of the two departments were, on a per capita basis, below the Canadian average, Roy said.

For example, he maintained, the department of industry, trade and commerce spent $180 less per capita in Quebec than elsewhere in the country between 1961 and 1977.

The figures, which have been challenged by federal authorities, came from the Quebec government's Office of Planning and Development, a body that has supplied figures to back the Parti Quebecois contention that the province pays more in taxes to Ottawa than it gets back in federal benefits.

But the Socred leader denied he was jumping on a PQ bandwagon, saying that since the time of Premier Maurice Duplessis, Quebec's leaders have demanded economic justice for the province.

"All we ask," Roy said, "is an equal part of Canada's revenues and just treatment of the Quebec taxpayer."

He said federal stinginess in Quebec has gone uncorrected because "Liberal governments have taken for granted that Quebec will be faithful to their party."

He said he was taking with a grain of salt Wednesday's threat by Supply and Services Minister Pierre DeBane to punish businesses that leave Quebec without a valid reason by striking them from the federal government's list of suppliers.

"We're in the midst of a campaign," Roy commented.

Roy said the government, if sincere, would start applying the policy immediately to end the "blackmail of Quebecers practised by certain companies.

"I'd like to know what Prime Minister Trudeau thinks about it (DeBane's announcement)." he continued. "It's normally up to the head of the government to announce this kind of policy and I doubt that Mr. DeBane will still be a minister after the election if the Liberals stay in power.

Roy continues his tour of Social Credit country in northwestern Quebec today.

Boot Liberals May 22: CNTU

QUEBEC (CP) — The Confederation of National Trade Unions wants its 200,000 members to help vote the federal Liberals out of office on May 22, but it won't endorse any of the opposition parties.

"CNTU member are free to vote for whom they want — as always — but I would remind them the federal Liberal government is anti-democratic, anti-labor" and should be voted out, CNTU president Norbert Rodrigue told a federation meeting Thursday.

But he criticized all the opposition parties, including the New Democratic Party, underscoring the difficulties that the NDP is having in generating enthusiasm among Quebec unions.

Of the province's four labor federations, only the 285,000-member Quebec Federation of Labor (QFL) supports the New Democrats, and at that, with some reservations. Speaking here this week, QFL president Louis Laberge reiterated his support for the NDP while criticizing it acidly on several counts, notably constitutional policy.

Laberge's endorsement is tempered by the fact that the QFL represents fewer than 40 per cent of unionized workers in the province. The balance belong to such independent unions as the Teamsters, or nationalist-oriented groups such as the CNTU and the 80,000-member Centrale de L'Enseignement du Quebec, which represents mostly teachers.

In his speech Thursday, Rodrigue dismissed all three opposition parties, including the New Democrats.

Irate Tax Payer Fires Tax Dept.

RICHMOND (UPC) — A Danish-born airline pilot, irritated by the rising level of federal income tax, said Thursday he fired the entire staff of Revenue Canada in a letter of dismissal attached to his income tax return.

"They are all public servants; I am a member of the public and, in effect, their employer. So as their employer, I have dismissed them," K.E. Kiel Nielsen said.

"Public servants are like any other servants - they can be hired and fired," said Nielsen, who earns over $40,000 a year as a pilot with a commercial airline and lives in suburban Richmond, adjacant to Vancouver International Airport.

His letter warned the tax department employees against ignoring the dismissal notice, he said.

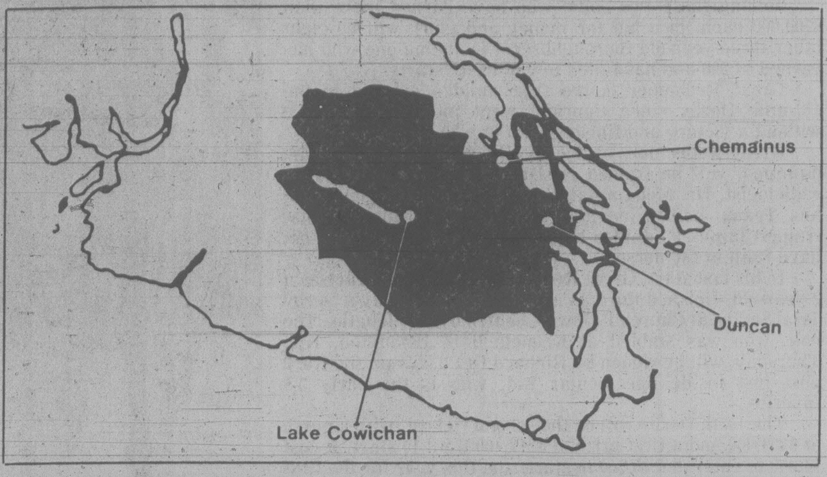
Around The Ridings



'Paskin Is Going to Hurt Us'—SC Candidate

How Many Socreds Can Duncan Mayor Swing Back into the Conservative Camp?

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

He's 80-years old if he's a day. Ramrod-straight he stands on a corner on Oak Street in downtown Chemainus, lapping up the noon-day sun and watching what little traffic there is approaching the Thetis Island ferry dock.

The intrusion is unwelcome but he answers, grudgingly: "How am I going to vote? Social Credit, of course. Always been a Socred."

Is his party going to win?

"Hell, no," he says. "It hasn't a snowball's chance. This is union country."

For as long as most people around here can remember Cowichan-Malahat has been a socialist stronghold. Former NDP chieftain Bob Strachan held the seat for 22 years until he retired in 1975.

His successor, Barbara Wallace, continued the tradition in the election that year, beating Socred candidate Dr. Charles Ennals of Duncan by nearly 1,200 votes.

Wallace, a 61-year-old grandmother and life-long social democrat, is hoping to repeat the performance. Her Socred opponent, Rex Hollett, isn't as articulate as Ennals.

But he's just as personable. Furthermore, he has support in areas of the riding that could hurt the NDP most.

Hollett, 46, is a Chemainus local-boy-made-good.

Although born in Newfoundland, he's lived in the area since he was 12. He married there. He's raised four children there. He's operated a tire business there for nearly 25 years. And for 2½ years he's served the town as alderman on North Cowichan council.

In the past, Chemainus voters have been loyal supporters of the NDP. Last election 53 per cent of the vote went to Wallace, compared to 37 per cent to Ennals.

Now Hollett's candidacy has created a dilemma for some voters.

As one woman said: "I've always voted NDP before. But this time I'm not sure. Rex is a good guy. I've known him 30 years. He'd get things done. He's a mover."

Hollett feels if he can take Chemainus and nearby Crofton he'll win the seat.

But that assessment was made before Duncan Mayor Ken Paskin entered the contest as a Conservative candidate.

The Socred strategy requires that Hollett do as well in Duncan as Ennals did in the last election when he topped the poll by a 313-vote margin over Wallace.

The ebullient, 49-year-old Paskin may well dash those hopes.

Outspoken and something of a political maverick, Paskin's capability as a vote-catcher has been amply tested. Over the past eight years he's been elected to one term as alderman and three as mayor of the city.

He says 90 per cent of the Socred voters are Conservatives at heart.

How many he'll be able to win over remains the single most important question of the campaign.

And one which has the Socreds worried.

Says Hollett: "He's definitely going to hurt us."

Paskin's straightforward, no-nonsense approach makes him a favorite at the all-candidates meetings. But as one voter expressed: "He can get away with that kind of style because he has the least to lose."

Although he worked for the Socreds in the last provincial election he holds little truck with the current party leaders in the riding. He speaks darkly of a "Socred Mafia" and accuses a senior party hack with trying to intimidate him — to the point of physical threats — to keep him from running.

With Ladysmith and Cassidy lopped off the riding in the government's redistribution of electoral districts, the Socreds have good reason for feeling optimistic.

192-Vote Difference

The two centres, which now form part of the Nanaimo riding, are heavily NDP. If the results of the two polls are subtracted from the totals in the 1975 election, there is only a 192-vote difference in favor of Wallace.

The Socreds can almost taste a win. Hollett won't say how much he's spending. But one thing is certain, he's not short of funds. He has connections in high places. He was a close friend of Gordon Doman, who died tragically in Phoenix, Arizona, last fall. Gordon's brother, Herb, is one of the richest men in the district, a staunch Socred supporter and a party fund-raiser in the last election.

There's help, too, from Victoria. Suddenly funds have been made available to keep the Lake Cowichan activity centre going another three months. The Arcadian Day Care Centre in Duncan has received a grant. A much-needed incinerator has been promised the Cowichan District. And surveyors have shown up laying out a new road to Crofton which the people have been trying to get for nearly 20 years.

If Wallace has a secret weapon to counter this politically-motivated largesse, it would have to be Hollett himself.

Hollett, who won the Socred nomination by a narrow margin over the lone other contender, Richard Ewing, is often his own worst enemy. He comes across poorly at the all-candidates meetings as a person who doesn't always understand his party's policies. At one meeting after Wallace said the NDP would return the inheritance tax for persons leaving an estate of $1 million or more, he leapt to his feet and said he'd up that to $4 million, forgetting the Socreds had abolished the tax entirely.

He says he favors limited development in the Cowichan estuary, but can't define the limits. In one breath he says he's opposed to using 2,4-D on Lake Cowichan and Shawnigan Lake; in the next he says he'd favor spraying if the experts believed it should be done.

A number of Socred supporters, particularly in the southern half of the riding, are anything but impressed. A party member from Mill Bay said she's in a quandary how to vote. It won't be for Hollett.

Wallace is still braced for a tight battle.

She believes the lack of a Liberal candidate is more of an advantage to her than to Hollett. In the last election the Liberal Jev Tothill got 1,600 votes.

She expects to get the lion's share of those freed votes and Mike Coleman, vice-president of the Cowichan Liberal party, agrees.

"My guess is the breakdown will be two to one in favor of the NDP," he says.

Wallace is also confident she can hold the northern half of the riding, despite Hollett.

She's more concerned about the southern half, places like Shawnigan Lake, Mill Bay, and Cobble Hill.

They've usually gone Socred but this time, because of the marked residential growth in the area, the voting pattern may change.

She says whichever way the vote swings will be decisive. The area holds the key to her political survival.

Another important factor in this campaign is the Indian vote.

The mood among the 1,750 members of the Cowichan Indian Band is one of deep dissatisfaction. The unemployment rate is staggering, around 85 per cent. And although the band pays out close to $2 million a year in social service taxes on its property holdings in Duncan, many members feel they are getting little or nothing in return from the government.

"I'm ready for a change," says Ernie Elliott, band manager.

Although he regards Wallace as the better person for the job, he's supporting Hollett.

"I've worked with him before. He's a tough guy to deal with. He knows what he wants and will do whatever he has to do to get it."

The trait commands respect.

There's a feeling, too, that nothing will ever move in Cowichan Valley unless the sitting member belongs to the party in power.

'Eliminate Opposition'

Hollett capitalizes on that widely-held belief wherever he goes.

And it never fails to anger the other two candidates.

"Complete hogwash," Paskin retorts. "That's like saying we'll be denied a voice in government if we elect someone else to represent us. No party should admit to that. It's immoral."

Says Wallace: "If you carry that theory to its logical conclusion you eliminate opposition. But that's what this government wants to do. It isn't prepared to live with the democratic system."

Wallace's biggest strength is that she is well-known and respected. She's worked hard for the riding and, having lived at Cedar and now Mill Bay for the past 43 years, understands the needs and dreams of the people. If the NDP wins the election she has been touted as the agriculture minister.

Her biggest failing is her inability to blow her own horn. Her style is decidedly low key. She can reel off all the reasons why a person should vote for her party, but when it comes to putting forward reasons why they should vote for her, the voice trails off.

She admits she's embarrassed by publicity. She flatly refuses to put her own sign on the front lawn of her Chapman Road log house. A sign for Jim Manley, the federal NDP candidate is there. But not one for Wallace.

I'm not a politician," she says. "I'm more a behind-the-scenes person."

The three candidates share this much in common — they all believe the principal issue in this campaign is the economy. Unemployment in the riding is about 10.4 per cent. Voter confidence in the three parties' ability to solve the problems is the ultimate deciding factor.

At least that's the way the politicians see it.

Lloyd Henricksen, a fisherman from Mill Bay, views it from a slightly different perspective.

"How can the Socreds or NDP hope to solve the big things like unemployment. That's a world-wide problem."

He's more impressed with the little things. He's happy about the increase in the homeowners grant. He'll take with pleasure his five free B.C. Resource Investment Corporation shares.

He feels the Socreds have done a good job. Although he's been an NDP supporter in the past, he's beginning to waver.

He hasn't made up his mind yet. He'll do that on May 10.

TOWN TALK

A jumbo I LIKE NDP sign on Elk Lake Drive proved a pushover for vandals Thursday night.

Candidate John Mika and his workers toiled off and on for a week over the eight-foot by 16-foot sign at the home of Gerry Martini, 4734 Elk Lake.

The sign was finally erected at 7 p.m. Three hours later Martini went outside to find the sign had been pushed over.

A crew will return tonight to restore it to its mountings.

The Socreds are also having some problems.

A resident notes that despite the reports Monday that Socred signs have been planted illegally on municipal property at Rockland and Moss, and Foul Bay and Fairfield, nothing has been done to relocate them.

A party spokesman said he wasn't about to act on press reports of the complaints. He was waiting for an official order from City Hall.

The order finally came on Thursday.

One of the first things Saanich Ald. Geoff Vantreight taught his sons when they began to learn their way around machinery was never tinker with an engine while it's running.

A few days ago he ignored his own advice — and paid the price by nearly losing a finger.

Vantreight was taking the oil filler cap off a tractor engine on Panama Flats when he caught the index finger of his right hand in the fan. The fan blade sliced the finger down to the knuckle. Vantreight nearly passed out but managed to radio for help, and was taken to hospital to be stitched up.

"He was very lucky," said son Ian. "I keep telling him to stick to his municipal stuff and leave this kind of thing to us."

It'll be a reunion with a difference when the Big Macs (no, they're not a Highland regiment) get together June 2 for a 10th anniversary celebration.

Membership is confined to those folk who've worked at the McDonald's location at Cedar Hill Crossroad and Shelbourne in the decade it's been open.

Still on reunions, nearly 500 former residents of Moose Jaw will get together Saturday in the Commons Building of the University of Victoria and will probably end up buying a piece of land from their old home town.

Pat Snow, one of the organizers of the reunion which takes place every three years in Victoria, says Moose Jaw mayor Scoop Lewrey will offer certificates at a price which will testify that the buyer now owns one centimetre of Moose Jaw.

'Blankets' For Weeds?

B.C. Hydro has agreed to consider non-chemical alternatives to control weed growth at two small cable terminal stations on Galiano Island, a spokesman for the Islands Trust said today.

The power authority had earlier intended to use a pellet application of the herbicide Primatol AP-55.

But John Rich, chairman of the Islands Trust — the planning authority responsible for the islands in the Georgia Strait and Howe Sound — said he was told this morning by a senior Hydro official that the soil sterilant may not be used.

The official told him a superintendent will be sent to Galiano to determine whether other treatment techniques, including growth-retarding plastic "blankets," could be employed.

"We are very pleased they are going to consider these alternatives," Rich commented.

The cable stations are located at two points on the island where the submarine cable emerges from the sea. The herbicide application, for which Hydro received a permit from the Pesticide Control Branch, had been scheduled for around mid-May.

Last February the Islands Trust passed a resolution opposing commercial herbicide use on rights-of-way on Galiano and other trust islands.

The trust asked the PCB not to grant such permits, and sent a copy of the request to Hydro.

SPCA Seeks New Man

The board of the Victoria branch of the SPCA Thursday night accepted the resignation of Don Adams as secretary-manager of the branch, board chairman Michael Mirams-Harrison said today.

Mirams-Harrison said the resignation became effective May 1. The organization will start advertising the vacancy next week.

Adams, 45, has been with the Victoria branch 10 years, and manager for the past four.

He said earlier this week one of his main reasons for resigning was to enable him to spend more time on his lifetime interest — birds.

Mirams-Harrison said Adams is a well-known authority in the field and this was an advantage to the society.

"But by the same token we are an organization dedicated to the welfare of all animals, and we have to spread ourselves around a little more fully," he added.

Merchants Split On Mall Closure

Merchant associations representing Government Street businesses are split over a proposal to close the mall for a three-week trial period in the near future.

That became clear at a special meeting of city hall's traffic committee today when the Victoria Downtown Business Association and the Harbor Square Merchants Association took opposing stands over the proposal.

Don't mess with the mall, it works just fine the way it is, said Philip Holmes, president of the business association.

"We are looking at a group of merchants (on the mall) who are doing extremely well. We are not dealing with something that is sick and needs medication," said Holmes.

He said merchandising is a fragile thing and urged the committee members not to tamper with a successful operation.

"We are looking now at a great street, so we are looking at a risk . . . do not toy with a success," said Holmes.

But Peter Hill, president of the Harbor Square group, said of the proposal: "As far as I am concerned it's a positive step if done properly . . .

"I don't want to see a 12-month mall that is not viable, but for the Swiftsure weekend, that would be fantastic," said Hill.

"We'd be cheating ourselves as merchants if we didn't give it a try," he added.

Committee chairman Ald. Bill McElroy has proposed the mall be closed to traffic for a three-week period to allow city researchers to gather statistical data on the effects of the closure.

He said the idea of a closure has been discussed many times in the past and "I thought it was about time we brought this to a head."

McElroy said that at least three weeks are needed to gather sufficient data.

"I don't know what we're going to find out. It may be a total disaster . . . but let's try it because right now everyone has a guess."

McElroy also said that he had taken a personal survey of businsses fronting the mall and counted 14 in favor of a test closure and five opposed.

He added that the vast majority of Victoria residents would support a traffic free mall.

"If we wanted to put this to a referendum it would win by a nine to one margin."

McElroy also criticized Holmes for wanting to keep the mall the way it is now because he said Holmes had lead the opposition in 1974 when the city had set out to change Government Street into a mall.

"You were wrong then and I think you are wrong now," he said to Holmes.

McElroy called the meeting to find out where merchants stand on the issue.

The mall proposal will be debated by council members at a committee-of-the-whole meeting next Tuesday.

No recommendations came out of today's meeting.

Longshot Maiden Enters Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Spectacular Bid and Flying Paster, who have combined for 19 stakes victories in 20 races, will hold their long-awaited showdown Saturday in the $200,000-added Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs.

Joining these two colts, who have earned more than $700,000 each, in a bid for money and glory will be eight other three-year-old thoroughbreds, including one who has earned $4,200 and has failed to win in six starts.

Great Redeemer is the first maiden entered in the 1¼-mile Derby since Fourulla went into the 1971 race without a victory and finished 19th in a 20-horse field.

Great Redeemer, owned by Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Mohammed, will be trained by Dr. Mohamed, a diagnostic radiologist. Dr. Mohammad said by phone from San Antonio, Texas, before leaving for Louisville Thursday that trainer James E. James had resigned because he did not have faith in the horse.

In his last start, Great Redeemer, who did not race as a 2-year-old, finished third as a 90-1 shot in Tuesday's Derby Trial Stakes at Churchill Downs, beaten by 11½ lengths. The colt, who was stabled at Keeneland in Lexington, Ky., Thursday, will be ridden by Richard DePass from the No. 2 post just inside Spectacular Bid, who is the early 3-5 favorite.

The 105th Derby will be the second richest, with a purse of $304,900 and a first prize of $217,400 if all 10 start. It cost $4,000 to enter and $3,500 to start, and this year for the first time, there is $200,000 in added money, up from $125,000. The richest Derby was 1974, won by Cannonade, when a 23-horse field swelled the purse to $326,500.

Post time is 2:38 p.m. PDT.

Each starter will carry 126 pounds. Others entered are Golden Act, Screen King, the entry of General Assembly and Sir Ivor Again, Shamgo, Lot o'Gold and King Celebrity.

The U.S. weather bureau forecast cloudy and unseasonably cool weather with a chance of showers Saturday.

Spectacular Bid has raced once on a sloppy track and suffered the first of the only two losses in his 14-race career when he finished fourth, beaten by 6¾ lengths in the Tyro Stakes at Monmouth Park Aug. 2, 1978. The son of Bold Bidder, ridden by Ronnie Franklin and owned by Harry, Teresa and Tom Meyerhoff, lost his next start, than began a 10-race winning streak that included victories in the Florida Derby, Flamingo and Blue Grass Stakes April 26.

But trainer Bud Delp said Thursday: "He's has two experiences on a track that was off enough to suit me that he handled it good."

Gordon Campbell, trainer of Benjamin J. Ridder's Flying Paster, also feels his colt can handle an off-track. He finished third on a good track while carrying 127 pounds and giving weight in the San Felipe Handicap March 17 for his only loss in his last 10 starts.

But Campbell and jockey Don Pierce both said it was not the track nor the weight that beat Flying Paster. He said the colt had sulked. "I had a lot of respect for him that day," said Pierce. "He didn't run ajump and got beat two noses and he was carrying 127 pounds."

Flying Paster rebounded to win the Santa Anita and Hollywood derbies. He has won 10 of 14 career starts and is 3-for-4 this year.

Golden Act worked a half-mile in 48 2-5 seconds in the rain Thursday, and trainer Loren Retelle said the track was firm. Golden Act, like Flying Paster a California-bred son of Gummo, won an allowance race in the slop at Santa Anita Feb. 4. The colt, owned by William H. Oldknow and Robert W. Phipps and ridden by Sandy Hawley, won the Louisiana and Arkansas derbies in his last two starts.

It will be the first Derby ride for Hawley, the seven-time Canadian champion jockey from Mississauga, Ont.

HOT NUMBER in Churchill Downs stable area is Shamgo, giving off clouds of steam while being washed down after early morning workout. Shamgo is 30-to-1 choice in Saturday's Kentucky Derby at Louisville. (AP Wirephoto).

Ratelle the Hero As Bruins Tie Set

BOSTON (CP) — Veteran Jean Ratelle's goal at 3:46 of overtime — his third of the game — lifted Boston Bruins to a 4-3 victory over Montreal Canadiens on Thursday, sending their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series back to Montreal with a new look.

Peter McNab scored the other goal for the Bruins before a Garden crowd of 14,654, while Pierre Mondou, Guy Lafleur and Guy Lapointe connected for the Canadiens, who have seen a 2-0 series lead melt to nothing and now are faced with the pressure of a fifth game at home with the series tied 2-2.

"The pressure's on them now," Boston coach Don Cherry noted. "We know we can win up there."

Cherry had sent the Bruins charging out of the gate in overtime, intent on having the issue decided in the first five minutes.

"The longer you go with the Canadiens, the harder it's going to be because they've got all those reserves back. That's what he (Montreal coach Scotty Bowman) does. (Cam) Connor scored against the (Toronto) Maple Leafs in overtime in their first series with fresh legs."

Fresh legs could well have come in handy again, after the second straight all-out game before the rabid Bruins fans.

Both goaltenders — Ken Dryden of Montreal and Boston's Gilles Gilbert — were outstanding in a sparkling playoff game. The constant end-to-end swing of play almost made it seem as if fans were watching a tennis match.

Cherry, who went to Gilbert after veteran Gerry Cheevers started — and lost — the first two games, acknowledged his netminder played a big role in the Boston victory.

"What can you say about Gilbert?" Cherry asked. "The goals that beat him he never had a chance on. He never even saw them."

Gilbert faced 24 Montreal shots, none in overtime, while the Bruins had 32 drives at Dryden, three in the extra session.

The winning goal developed when Boston defender Rick Smith caught the Canadiens on a line change, firing a quick lead pass to Rick Middleton, who relayed the puck to Ratelle as he swept in on Dryden.

"You can't think at a time like that," said Ratelle. "You get the puck and what you try to do is hit the opening. It's instinct. You don't have five seconds to think about it.

"But I got a good shot away, and it hit the left corner on the ice."

That was the signal for the Bruins to smother Ratelle with affection in the corner of the rink while Dryden skated, head bowed, off the ice. The crowd took the cue to give the Bruins their longest, lustiest standing ovation of the evening.

The result guaranteed the Boston faithful at least one more look at their heroes, in the sixth game of the series next Tuesday night. But first comes the fifth game Saturday night at the Forum in Montreal — with, as Cherry remarked, considerable pressure resting on the Canadiens.

Nystrom's Goal Out of the Blue

NEW YORK (CP) — For a moment Thursday night, Bob Nystrom of New York Islanders might have thought the old law about things that go up must come down had been suspended.

His game-winning overtime goal against New York Rangers came on a strange play in which he and Rangers goalie John Davidson collided in a race for the puck and it squirted high in the air behind the out-of-position netminder about 40 feet out of the goal.

"I was just standing there, waiting for it to come down," Nystrom said afterwards. "When it came down, I pushed it in the net."

But the wait seemed endless, both for Nystrom and the 17,374 fans in Madison Square Garden.

"I was waiting for it to come down," he repeated. "I didn't want to swipe at it and maybe miss the net, but it seemed like it was never going to come down."

Nystrom's goal, at 3:40 of the extra period, tied the best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series at two games each.

The Islanders had led 2-1 early in the third period on goals by John Tonelli and Billy Harris, before Don Maloney tied it for the Rangers with his second goal of the night.

The winner came after Maloney blasted a shot from the point that caromed around the Islanders' net. Clarke Gillies picked it up at the blue line after a brief duel with defenceman Mario Marois and rapped it towards Nystrom, who was cruising through centre ice.

"It was a race with Big John," Nystrom said.

"I felt I beat him there," said Davidson. "His momentum carried the puck towards our net. I just slid out of the play.

"I figured maybe our guy would get a chance to get back. But not today."

The big goaltender said his natural impulse was to charge for the puck.

"Hockey happens on instinct and knowledge and experience and I just came out and tried to beat him to the puck," he explained. "We collided and the momentum carried the puck over top of me and he just waited for it to come down like a little bird from heaven."

Nystrom said the win was a big one for his team, which was heavily favored against the Rangers, but has found the going a lot tougher than many had expected.

The game was an amazing demonstration of hockey skills. Davidson and Billy Smith of the Islanders provided the clubs with strong goaltending. Time and again they turned back the big guns.

Ranger captain Dave Maloney took the loss and the strange winning goal philisophically.

"That's the breaks, you know," he shrugged. "There's really nothing you can say."

Third-Period Blitz Gives Kings Title

PORTLAND (CP) — Brandon Wheat Kings took advantage of a major penalty to Portland early in the third period and scored three power-play goals in just under two minutes to roll to a 6-3 victory over the Winter Hawks and capture the Western Hockey League championship Thursday.

Brandon won the best-of-seven series 4-2 and now will represent the WHL in next week's Memorial Cup playoffs in Quebec.

Brandon took a 1-0 lead on a goal by Brian Propp with three seconds left in the first period but Portland came back with goals by Don Keller and Tim Tookey in the second period. David Babych gave Portland a 3-1 advantage early in the third period, but Blake Wesley of the Hawks drew a five-minute major for high-sticking at 1:08 and the Wheat Kings went to work.

Ray Allison, Propp and Brad McCrimmon scored the power-play goals to give Brandon a 4-3 lead.

Laurie Boschman and Brant Kiessig finished the scoring for the Wheat Kings later in the period.

Oilers In Lead On Lucky Win

EDMONTON (CP) — Coach Glen Sather said his Edmonton Oilers were lucky to emerge from a World Hockey Association playoff game Thursday night with a 5-2 win over New England Whalers.

"We tried to sit on a three-goal lead and made a lot of mistakes," said Sather after the Oilers cruised to a 3-0 lead in the first two periods, then almost blew the game in the final 20 minutes.

The victory gave the Oilers a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven semi-final series. The sixth game will be played in Springfield, Mass., Sunday and the seventh, if needed, in Edmonton Tuesday.

New England's early assault produced two goals and had Edmonton reeling. The Oilers survived, Sather said, only because of the goaltending heroics of 37-year-old Dave Dryden.

Wayne Gretzky scored three of the Edmonton goals before a crowd of 11,401, bringing his series total to six.

Not Just Another Joe

Times News Services

When you're just a guy named Joe, it's tough making it big in the big leagues — especially when your brother's name is Phil.

The success of his older brother has overshadowed Joe Niekro throughout his baseball career. And even though he has not managed to match Phil's accomplishments, Joe has done all right for himself.

The Houston pitcher won the 97th game of his major-league career Thursday, hurling a 4-1 National League triumph over St. Louis Cardinals with late relief help.

Niekro delivered only 89 pitches, mixing a good fastball and slider with his time-honored knuckler.

While Niekro's knuckler was dancing in the dark, St. Louis manager Ken Boyer was impressed.

"He doesn't just bring it down Broadway, either," said Boyer. "He can pitch it where he wants it. He moves it around. It's very difficult for a hitter to get good wood on what he throws."

In other National League action, San Francisco Giants beat New York Mets 7-5, San Diego Padres routed Montreal Expos 10-2 and Los Angeles Dodgers turned back Philadelphia Phillies 5-2. Rain postponed the Atlanta-at-Pittsburgh game.

The victory improved Houston's record to 16-8, the Astros' best start in 18 years.

Meanwhile in the American League, Minnesota reliever Mike Marshall continued to sparkle.

"I'm throwing the ball as well as I have in other years," the seemingly indestructible pitcher said after picking up his third victory in a 7-6 win over Detroit Tigers.

Thus, the Cy Young Award winner now has had a hand in 12 of Minnesota's 16 victories so far this season, helping carry the Twins to the top of the West Division.

In the night's only other AL game, two bases-loaded walks by Tom Underwood in the ninth inning provided Milwaukee Brewers with a 5-4 victory over Toronto Blue Jays.

The Chicago-at-Texas game was postponed by rain.

Early Passes Benefit Sooke

Sooke K&R took an early walk to victory Thursday, tripping Elks-Athletics 5-3 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Central Park.

The first four Sooke batters — Jim Boyd, Bob Butterworth, Mike Lee and Norm Goudie — drew walks from losing-pitcher Ken Fox in the first inning.

With one out, Mike Pimlott followed with a two-run double, Ernie Holness came up with a run-scoring single and Pimlott came home on a fielders' choice.

In Victoria Senior Women's League play at Hyacinth Park, Debbie Derkson pitched five no-hit innings and Gail Prince hit a triple and a double as Stockers North Americans blanked Strathcona Stingers, 9-0.

Bemister's Welding downed Butler Brothers 6-2 in the other game with Karen Perkins collecting the win. Terry Crocker and Kelly Oliver had two hits apiece for Bemisters and Diana Daniels had four hits in four trips to the plate for Butlers.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Barry Moen blasted out two home runs to drive in five runs as Mears Realty tripped Remco Office Systems 7-1 in a Heywood Men's League game.

Beer at Ball Park

Beer and baseball, a popular mix at many American stadiums, may soon appear at Victoria's Royal Athletic Park.

Victoria council's recreational facilities committee Thursday supported an application by the city's recreational services department to sell beer and cider at the park.

The committee endorsed the plan after recreation and community services manager Jack Morgan said the beverages would be sold only when the stadium is open for a sports event.

He said the bar could be closed whenever the city wished, and suggested that it would not be in operation everytime the stadium is used, but just when the sale of beer and cider seemed appropriate.

Ald. Bill Tindall expressed some concern.

"How are we going to control over-indulgences?" he asked Morgan. "Can you cut people off?"

Morgan said the sales would be in a restricted area and people wouldn't be allowed to wander into the stands with their beer.

At the same meeting the committee turned down a request to establish a lounge at the Crystal Pool.

Ald. Murray Glazier, who supported the Royal Athletic Park proposal, said he couldn't support the pool request until he had more information.

Setting up a lounge could cost a lot, he said, and the committee should have some figures on it.

The committee agreed to table the matter for two weeks.

Campbell Makes Pan-Am Team

Warren Campbell of Victoria, a rookie infielder-outfielder, was selected to fill in one of the four berths available on the national Pan-American Games men's softball squad following a five-day camp at Royal Athletic Park.

Canadian-champion Victoria Budgets will form the 14-man nucleus of the Canadian team going to San Juan, Peurto Rico, July 1-15.

The other players named to the team Thursday were Rob Guenther of Saskatoon, Mike Henderson of Brookfield, N.S., and Cliff Bishop of Winnipeg.

The full 18-man squad left today for a 10-game tour of Arizona, starting with a Saturday doubleheader in Prescott.

Budget head coach Harvey Stevenson, who along with two evaluators from the Canadian Softball Association made the selections, said he was gratified with the fine showing by Campbell, who topped the camp with a .465 batting average.

"There was a lot of additional pressure on him," said Stevenson. "Not only was he trying to make the Pan-Am team . . . he was also trying to stick with Budgets."

"He had the strongest arm in camp and also showed the most over-all enthusiasm and hustle.

"I told him before the camp that he would have to show better than the rest to make it and he came up big," added Stevenson.

Guenter and Bishop topped the pitching statistics and were obvious choices. Guenter, the leading hurler at the Canadian championships last year, gave up only three hits and struck out 16 in 11 innings while Bishop allowed six hits in nine innings.

Henderson, a second baseman, showed good range on defence and batted .279.

In addition to Stevenson, who might be a possible designated hitter, the other Budget players making the trip are Reg Underwood, Dave Williams, Randy Benn, Dennis Eckert, Bob Holness, Carl Walker, John Green, Alden Govenlock, Dave Wilson, Dave Ruthowsky, Bob Walton, Mark Smith and Sonny Phillips.

Pitcher Andy Konopacki won't be making the trip because he once played as a professional.

Wind, Seals and Sea Lions Slow Some Fishing Action

Wind, seals and sea lions have hampered action for salmon fishermen in several areas around Vancouver Island during the past week.

Charles Cornett was one of the fishermen to beat the odds and wind at Sooke in recent days. He boated a chinook that tipped the scales at 23.5 pounds Monday while trolling a Radiant silver minnow off Secretary Island.

It was one of the forerunners of the Columbia run which should arrive in the next few weeks.

Action at Becher Bay has been dampened completely by wind but chinooks to 15 pounds have been weighed in at Pedder Bay from the stretch of water between Race Passage and Church Island. Blueback catches are tapering off and the chinooks have been landed on strip or silver Squirts trolled with around a pound of lead and 125 feet of line.

Several fishermen have also come in with ling cod.

Fishermen off Oak Bay are having to work a little harder but are still getting some good catches of blues, a few chinooks to 18 pounds and a few cod. Buzz-Bombs, Krippled-Ks, hootchies and Deadly Dicks have all worked equally well with top catches coming from The Gap, Flats and Ten Mile Point.

Murray Kosick landed a 26.6-pounder earlier this week while trolling a five-inch minnow off Coal Island and other good catches have been taken off Sidney Spit, Saanichton Spit and the power wharf on James Island.

The bite seems to be on during the early morning and late evening with most of the catches made close to the bottom either trolling Squirts or jigging.

Krippled-Ks, a flasher, eight or 10 ounces of weight and 30 to 50 feet of line have produced excellent returns of chinooks to 14 pounds off Wain Rock at Deep Cove. Drift-fishing with either a Buzz-Bomb or Stingsilda has produced other good catches and ling cod to 25 pounds have been boated by jiggers working off Wain and Moses Point.

A few chinooks to 20 pounds scattered around the middle portion of Saanich Inlet have grabbed deeply-trolled strip and plugs.

A few blues are also showing in the middle of the Inlet.

In Finlayson Arm, chinooks to 14.5 pounds are turning up near Goldstream Island and Chesterfield Rock but fishermen should be prepared for a little competition. One boater counted a total of 37 sea lions in front of the Island and couldn't begin to tally up the number of seals in the same group.

Further up-Island, a few blues are showing off Coffin Point as well as Tent and Thetis islands.

Blues averaging two pounds form the main catch just about anywhere off Nanaimo and "lot's of chinooks" up to four pounds have been landed on deeply-trolled hootchies off Five Fingers and near Winchesea Island.

Wind has hampered action at the mouth of Alberni Inlet but a few chinooks to 20 pounds have been landed in San Mateo Bay right at daybreak.

Courtenay fishermen are catching blues right on the surface in scattered locations.

Numerous blues to 2.5 pounds and a few chinooks to 20 pounds are coming in from just about anywhere off Campbell River. Any type of lure with red or green coloration is working for the blues and strip is taking the chinooks.

Trout anglers are starting to pick up better catches in the top end of the Cowichan River as well as in Cowichan, Dougan's, Comox, Upper Campbell, Lower Campbell, Buttle and Upper Quinsam lakes.

Oak Bay, Titans Cruise to Victory

BURNABY — Oak Bay Barbarians and Victoria Titans emerged among the five unbeaten teams following two matches in preliminary round-robin competition at the British Columbia high school rugby championship tournament here Thursday.

Claremont Spartans, on the other hand, suffered two losses in the 16-team tourney at Central Valley Complex.

Oak Bay, runner-up in the Greater Victoria League, crushed Vancouver Point Grey 20-0 and topped Tweedsmuir of the Fraser Valley 13-6 while Titans blanked Mountain, the top Fraser Valley side, 19-0 and downed Vernon, 19-3.

The other unbeaten squads were Vancouver-champion Magee, Hillside of West Vancouver and New Westminster.

Claremont were dropped 20-3 by Hillside and 17-14 by Centennial of Coquitlam.

Paul Russell led Barbarians against Point Grey with two tries while Wayne Andrews and George Stark scored one try each and Nick Aleksenko kicked two converts. Tim Anderson and Barry Woods scored single tries against Tweedmuir and Aleksenko kicked a penalty goal and a convert.

Titans were sparked by a three-try performance from Mark Cardinal against Mountain while Mark Wyatt kicked a penalty goal and two converts. Wyatt scored a try and a penalty goal against Vernon and John Florian added the other try.

Round-robin play wraps up today with the top two teams from each of the four divisions advancing to the single-loss elimination championship.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

Daniel Leading

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Beth Daniel, after deciding "to get some excitement going," birdied the last two holes Thursday for a two-under-par 70 and a one-stroke lead in the first round of the Women's International golf tournament.

The two-time U.S. amateur champion from Charleston, S.C., in her first year as a professional, sank putts of 4½ and five feet on the 17th and 18th holes. Her 36-34 scores put her ahead of Patricia Meyers and Gloria Ehret, both with 71s.

Nancy Lopez, Jane Blalock, Alexandra Reinhardt, Donna Horton White and Donna Caponi Young were tied at 72.

Overnight Storms Force Pros to Take the Day Off

HOUSTON (AP) — Overnight thunderstorms flooded the Woodlands Country Club course and washed out today's round in the $300,000 Houston Open golf tournament.

Second-round play now is scheduled for Saturday.

No immediate decision was made on the remainder of the tournament schedule.

At the end of 18 holes, five men shared the lead with five-under-par 66s. They were Bruce Lietzke, a runner-up in his last two starts, Jim Dent, Jim Colbert, Butch Baird and Leonard Thompson.

One stroke back at 67 were Gary McCord, Al Geiberger, Barney Thompson, Tommy Valentine, Alan Tapie and Bill Rogers.

Lee Trevino shot a 69, three shots back, but defending champion Gary Player could do no better than match par 71.

Dave Barr of Kelowna and Dan Halldorson of Brandon were each eight shots back after shooting opening-round 74s.

Court Ruling Favors CART

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — "No question about it," said Pat Patrick, president of Championship Auto Racing Teams, who saw victory in a federal judge's ruling Thursday that kept eight race drivers as plaintiffs in CART's suit against the United States Auto Club and the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

"Any reasonable man, and the judge appears to be a very reasonable man, would have ruled that way," Patrick said. "It involves the drivers' right to work.

"If they're not included as plaintiffs, they have to go race some place else. What's Johnny Rutherford gonna drive? A go-kart?"

Patrick said he would interpret Thursday's ruling by U.S. District Court Judge James E. Noland as a positive sign for CART, which is seeking acceptance of 19 entries which were barred from the May 27 Indianapolis 500 by USAC.

The 19 entries were submitted by six CART teams, of which Patrick's is one.

Noland, who recessed Thursday's hearing until today, said he hoped to make a ruling on CART's request for a temporary restraining order against USAC and the Speedway before Saturday's start of practice for the 500.

USAC and the Speedway claimed the eight drivers, including former Indy winners Al and Bobby Unser, Rutherford and Gordon Johncock, do not have standing as plaintiffs since the rejection of the entries was not directed at them.

However, CART lawyer John Frasco told Noland he intends to introduce evidence "that will clearly state at the time (of the USAC action) there was considerable discussion about penalizing three drivers (Rutherford, Johncock and Bobby Unser) for making public statements against USAC."

Noland ruled that the drivers "are in the nature of proper plaintiffs in this case and will continue to be so recognized."

Five of the six car owners — Patrick, Roger Penske, Dan Gurney, Tyler Alexander and Jim Hall — all members of the CART board of directors, were at Thursday's hearing. Also in the courtroom were defending Indy champ Al Unser, who drives for Hall; Rutherford, who drives for Alexander's Team McLaren; Rick Mears, who drives for Penske, and Wally Dallenbach, who drives for Patrick.

CART broke from USAC because of what it felt was inadequate representation on the 21-man board that governed championship racing in the United States.

Cat 910, 920, and 930 Wheel Loaders. They're easy on your budget, strong on the job.

Dollar-for-dollar, pound-for-pound, yard-for-yard, no compact loaders on the market today can give you a better competitive edge than these more-for-your-money machines from Caterpillar. Whether you buy, lease or rent, you get outstanding efficiency and high-profit performance at a price you can afford.

Don't let their size fool you. These 1 to 2¼ cu. yd. loaders deliver big machine production when the chips are down—or the dirt, rock, pipe, brick or lumber. They are jacks-of-all-trades and masters of most; versatile, dependable, a breeze to maintain, and with all the built-in toughness of the biggest Cat equipment.

Check the specs. The 910, 920 and 930 give you big displacement engines with power to spare; articulated steering for tight corners and faster cycles; full power shift transmission for on-the-go shifting and increased productivity; good reach and dump height, high breakout force, and a range of buckets and attachments that lets you bid on dozens of different jobs—and get 'em!

Tough Test For Oriole and Crew

AROUND OUR SHORES

The navy's 90-foot ketch HMCS Oriole is on her way next Wednesday, heading for Astoria, Ore. and one of the toughest races in the Pacific Northwest.

And, for about 25 of her crew, it will be their first crack at sailing.

They are part of the new contingent that arrived at the Naval Officers Training Centre in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt this week.

The event is the second annual 200-mile Astoria-Victoria International Race and Oriole will become the first Canadian boat to compete in it.

The race was organized by the Corinthian Yacht Club of Portland and most of the boats taking part will stay in Victoria in order to sail the Swiftsure 136.2-mile classic on the last weekend in May.

The race starts on the morning of May 12 off the mouth of the Columbia River and ends near the Ogden Point docks. The time limit will be 100 hours.

Oriole's skipper, Lt.-Cmdr. Bill Walker, while starting off with a raw crew, can be expected to give a good performance if the winds are strong enough to let the veteran ketch come into her own.

Victorians couldn't help but be proud when the "people's boat" won the 1978 Pacific International Sail Training Race from Diamond Head to Victoria, beating out Lol Killam's Graybeard of the Royal Vancouver Yacht Club, boat for boat.

Bill says he'll spend the first day out of Victoria in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, working up his crew in spinnaker-flying and other drills. They'll anchor the first night but from then on it will be sailing around-the-clock.

Oriole will be racing under the colors of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

The CFSA will hold its annual opening day and sail-past at the Munro Head clubhouse on Sunday. The clubhouse will be open at noon and the flag-raising ceremony will follow at 1 p.m. with chaplain Rod Ives of Royal Roads Military College blessing the fleet.

The sail-past will begin at 2 p.m. with boats going by under sail if the winds co-operate.

Commodore Bill Sargent will take the salute in Bill Smyth's Wasko II. Among those aboard Wasko II will be Capt. Frank Hope, squadron commander of the Training Squadron. He will be representing Rear-Admiral Michael Martin, commander maritime forces Pacific.

As in past years, the sail-past will be followed by races for both the squadon's dinghy and keel boat sailors. Up for grabs will be the Cock of the Walk and Transon Trophies.

Many of the visiting boats will arrive on Saturday, having taken part in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's third annual single-handed race from Cadboro Bay to Esquimalt Harbor. The race, which begins at 10 a.m., is for keel boats with Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet ratings. The skippers will be permitted to opt out of flying spinnakers in order to lower their ratings.

RVYC will have series racing again this Wednesday, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Eleven Thunderbirds were on the line this Wednesday with Gary Cooney's Hocus being the big winner. After her came Bob Grundison's Owl, John Malleson's Sunday and Dennis Robinson's Coco.

Jim Allen, Rupert Holmes-Smith and Dave Richardson were the top Laser sailors.

The final results of PHRF and Cal 20 competition were not available in time for this column.

Steve Merriman's Country Stle was over-all winner among the International Offshore Rule boats that took part in the club's race to Dungeness and back on Sunday. George Johnstone's Tarquin IV was top PHRF boat, runner-up being Jack Woodward's Puff.

Sixteen boats turned out for the first of the Turkey Head Sailing Association's Tuesday night racing this week. Coco won the race, being followed by Soren Isbrand's Danish Pastry, Larry Shorter's Kila Kila, Bob Callow's Minstrel, Ron Jewula's Beowulf, Bill Mottran's Maple Sea, Graham Morgan's Sea Pointer and Brian Day's Moxy.

There'll be series raciung again on Tusday. Things get under way at 6:30 p.m.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club sre planning a sortie in the Jordan River area on Sunday and will meet at the Helmcken Road parking area at 10 a.m.

Aid for Centre Vote-Getter?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy said Thursday she would be surprised if the federal government's announcement it will help pay for a $25-million trade and convention centre here did not win some votes for both governments involved in the project, the federal Liberals and the provincial Socreds.

McCarthy's comment came after Jack Horner, the federal industry, trade and commerce minister, said the federal government would contribute at least $10 million to the proposed centre.

Senator Ray Perrault told a news conference, at which Liberal candidates almost outnumbered reporters, that the cabinet decided to back the centre before either the May 22 federal election or the May 10 provincial election was called.

Province 'Pockets' C-o-L Hike

SURREY (CP) — The provincial government is holding back federal cost-of-living increments to senior citizens by reducing the provincial contribution, according to Surrey NDP candidate Ernie Hall.

Hall said month-end cheques received by seniors show an increment in the federal contribution, but there is no difference in the total payout. He said the provincial government is pocketing the difference.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm, the former human resources minister, said that ministry's computer automatically adjusts the pay cheques and passes on the difference at the time of an over-all increase in pension payments.

Burger Poll: Bennett in Pickle?

VANCOUVER (CP) — NDP leader Dave Barrett can be excused for relishing the results of the lastest hamburger poll because Barrett burgers are outselling Bennett burgers by 51 per cent.

John Dys, a city restaurant owner, has been conducting hamburger election polls in B.C. for 15 years and says he's never been out by more than 10 per cent.

In 1975, a Dys poll in then-premier Barrett's supposedly safe Coquitlam riding showed Bennett burgers outselling Barrett burgers 51 per cent to 36 per cent. And, when the dust had cleared, Social Credit newcomer Geroge Kerster won the seat.

Dys' conducts the poll in his two Frying Dutchmen restaurants by listing hamburgers by party leaders. Buyers can purchase burgers for Barrett, Premier Bill Bennett, Conservative Leader Vic Stephens and Liberal leader Jev Tothill.

The latest results show Bennett is favored by only 20 per cent of burger buyers at both restaurants, while Barrett is favored by 72 per cent at one site and 70 per cent at the other. Stephens and Tothill are well back.

The 1975 poll was conducted jointly with a province-wide steak restaurant chain. One week before the election, the accumulative results gave Bennett 54 per cent and Barrett 36 per cent. Former Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and former Conservative leader Scott Wallace both had five per cent.

Social Credit won the election with 49 per cent of the popular vote. The NDP collected 39 per cent, the Liberals seven and Tories four.

Dys said the election campaigns bolster sales, with business tripling since the May 10 provincial election was called last month.

Housewife Pension Promised by NDP

B.C. '79

NANAIMO (CP) — Two months of liquor profits would pay for a portable pension plan for housewives and small businessmen, and an NDP government would have such a program in two years, leader Dave Barrett said Thursday.

Barrett, campaigning here for the May 10 provincial general election, said during a news conference the plan would be for all those who do not have plans, including working mothers and housewives.

The plan would be operated through the B.C. Savings and Trust Corp., established by his government in 1975 but never activated by the current Social Credit government.

The former premier, who first promised the plan when seeking the re-election of his government in 1975, said participation would be voluntary.

The aim would be to provide economic and social security beyond the traditional welfare scheme for small business people, people working in unorganized or minimum-wage jobs, working women or mothers and housewives.

"For mothers and housewives we would supplement the premiums on a graduated scale if necessary."

Barrett said the annual cost would not exceed two motnhs liquor profits, slightly more than $28 million a year.

He said he also would like to see women get a guaranteed minimum wage, salary or pension benefits once they reach age 55 because they are least able to cope with the trauma of death, divorce, separation or desertion.

"It certainly is not too minimal for women. There are separate and distinct prblems for women in North American society in terms of changing social patterns and social structures."

Barrett continued to draw overflow crowds on his whirlwind campaign tour of central and southern Vancouver Island.

More than 900 people took part in a rally here for former finance minister Dave Stupich, the Nanaimo MLA in the last legislature.

Earlier, in Port Alberni, Barrett did a little mainstreeting, running into people more concerned about the health and well being of his family than about policy.

Questioned by one young woman who had played baseball against his 18-year-old daughter Jane, Barrett said she currently is at a kibbutz in Israel.

He recalled that he had been stuck with the food bill for her team when it won the island championship.

During the mainstreeting, Barrett wondered why a Social Credit campaign sign was on a B.C. Hydro bus, but was told that the transit buses are privately owned in Port Alberni.

He also took time out to enter the headquarters of Liberal candidate Hugh Anderson seeking return to Ottawa in the Nanaimo-Alberni riding, and shook hands with the campaign workers there.

At a rally for Bob Skelly, Alberni provincial NDP candidate, which again attracted an overflow crowd, Barrett renewed his appeal for a televised debate on the issues with Premier Bill Bennett, suggesting that the appropriate time would be during their separate appearances Monday and Tuesday on the television program "of a certain Scotsman (Jack Webster)".

Barrett accused Bennett of not dealing with the issues and suggested that "yelling, hollering, losing one's temper and calling other people names is not the way to conduct an election campaign."

Gas, Heating Oil Controls If NDP Wins, Says Barrett

An NDP government would re-impose controls on gasoline and home heating oil prices, party leader Dave Barrett said Thursday.

The government also would give competition to international oil firms by selling gasoline once its proposed oil refinery is built in the B.C. interior, he said.

Barrett told an overflow crowd of 800 people in Duncan he believes in a "little bit of free enterprise."

"I am sick and tired of the oil companies going down the main streets and side streets of every community in the province and helter-skelter putting out of business the corner store gas operator by putting in self-serve operations.

"They are self-serving to the oil companies — not to the small businessman."

He said that once an oil refinery is built and functioning in Merritt, "we will go into the business of selling gasoline in the market-place at the refinery gate, and we will sell it to any wholesaler who wants to sell gas in competition to the big oil companies."

"Let's take them on a little bit, and let's give them a little competition."

The NDP has been pushing for an oil refinery in the province for the last four years and Barrett said he had reached an accord for one with the giant multinational British Petroleum just before his government was defeated in 1975.

'Never Again' Will NDP Win - Bennett

B.C. '79

TERRACE (CP) — The NDP will never again win an election in B.C. because it has lost its principles, Premier Bill Bennett said Thursday.

Bennett, making his last campaign effort outside of the Vancouver area and his own Okanagan South riding before the May 10 provincial election, said former supporters of the NDP have deserted the party in thousands.

He told an audience of about 450 in this northern Interior town it is obvious that there is a quiet campaign going on inside the NDP to replace Dave Barrett as leader.

Earlier in the campaign, Bennett refused to make predictions about election results except to say the vote will be close. He abandoned that cautious approach Thursday.

The premier said that to attain power the NDP had gone to brokers who said they could deliver thousands of votes. This sold out the proud traditions of the CCF, the predecessor of the NDP, he said.

"They lost their principles along the way and that's why they'll never come to power again in this province any time."

His comments were made in response to a heckler, one of many who have dogged his public appearances recently, who asked the premier to tell him about Ralph Loffmark, the former Social Credit health minister who said this week that Barrett would be a better premier than Bennett.

Bennett replied that he would rather talk about Frank Calder, the former NDP cabinet minister who defected to Social Credit in 1975 and thousands of others who have left the NDP cause.

"We have tasted them as government and that taste has turned bitter in the mouths of voters in British Columbia."

Later, in response to a question, Bennett said there is a move afoot to replace Barrett, adding that the NDP seems to be hiding Jim Kinnaird, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

Earlier Thursday, Bennett put in a hectic day of campaigning in the ridings of Prince George North, Prince George South and Skeena. Both Social Credit and the NDP consider the three ridings as critical to their election efforts.

Bennett left Victoria early in the morning and flew into Prince George where he cooked pancakes at a breakfast and announced a federal-provincial $3 million loan for development of an industrial park.

Then he was off to Mackenzie in the riding of Prince George North for a luncheon meeting in a church.

"The quality of life here is remarkable . . . Let's keep it that way."

THE MOST CRITICAL FIVE MINUTES IN BUICK HISTORY...
ARE YOUR FIRST FIVE MINUTES TEST DRIVING A 1980 FRONT-WHEEL-DRIVE SKYLARK.

Buick is now out to change your mind about driving in the future. And a 1980 Skylark should do it, beginning with the first few minutes of your test drive.

You see, between what you're used to, and an all-new Buick Skylark – the critical difference is in the driving!

You don't have to leave the showroom to see that Skylark's new styling is crisp and clean. Or that Skylark feels soft and luxurious and roomy to sit in.

The real test is the test drive! How else can you tell that Skylark has a smooth, effortless ride similar to a big car, with the quick, precise response of a smaller car? Or that you get 4-cylinder 0-100 KPH acceleration as peppy as last year's comparably-equipped V6 model, and V6 response as good as last year's 5.0 litre V8 because of the better power-to-weight ratio? And, until you get out on the road, how can you really experience Skylark's serene, quiet ride?

BREAKING NEW GROUND IS NOTHING NEW TO BUICK.

A new Skylark has MacPherson strut front suspension, which helps give it the feel of a big-car ride, yet hugs it to the road through the corners... and, like the current Riviera, Motor Trend magazine's Car of the Year, Skylark has front-wheel drive, for impressive handling, stability and traction.

WHEN THE WEATHER IS TERRIBLE, FRONT WHEEL DRIVE IS TERRIFIC.

Skylark has the positive control that comes with rack-and-pinion steering. And Skylark's engine is mounted transversely (facing sideways), which helps explain all that room for up to five people.

What's new? Everything. And to drive it, is to know it.

There are six new models. A Skylark Coupe and a Sedan (uncommonly, there's about the same room in the rear of a two-door as in a four-door, so one size fits all); then, there's a Sport Coupe and a Sport Sedan; and our ultra-Skylarks, the Limited 2-door Coupe and Limited 4-door Sedan. As for available options, the new Skylark offers a wider choice than ever before. Just ask your Buick dealer.

NEW TIMES. NEW BUICKS.

The 1980 Skylark is a new brand of Buick that is quite spectacular for its combination of very good ideas in so many areas. Buick has a lot riding on how well Skylark's new engineering and design features are received – but, frankly, we're confident that the 1980's will belong to cars like Buick's new Skylark.

Don't hold back. Take that critical test drive now. Buying or leasing, a 1980 Buick Skylark could be the perfect new car for you.

YOU'RE PROTECTED

Candidates at Rights Rally

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

A rally Thursday night of minority groups calling for the replacement of the present B.C. Human Rights Commission attracted five NDP and a Liberal candidate.

Two provincial and three federal candidates all said a few words in support of the newly formed Human Rights Coalition, and then went on to say a few more words praising their own parties.

The coalition, representing 14 minority groups, was formed last month in reaction to derogatory comments and jokes made about women and homosexuals at a commission meeting April 3.

Commissioners were called "official bigots" and compared to members of the Nazi Party and the Klu Klux Klan during the course of the 2½ hour public meeting, held in the Unitarian Church Hall on Superior Street.

Two members of the commission, Harry Crosby and Doug Mowat, attended the meeting. Mowat defended the commission and said he was shocked to hear commissioners referred to as bigots, but refused to answere specific questions from the audience.

At the end of the meeting, the coalition resolved to form an advisory committee to help the government promote human rights.

It will also ask for a new commission comprised of members of minority groups — such as homosexuals, blacks, senior citizens and Native Indians — and people with expertise in the human rights field.

Victoria NPD candidate Charles Barber pledged support to the coalition while his lesser-well-known running mate in Victoria riding, Gordon Hansen, took the opportunity to acquaint himself with the crowd of about 100 people.

Federal candidates Bob Cameron (NDP, Esquimalt-Saanich), Gretchin Brewin (NDP Victoria), and Alan Peterson (Liberal, Esquimalt-Saanich) also said they support the coalition.

Peterson said he was shocked by some of the comments made at the meeting and told the group he found it hard to believe some of the commissioners could have been chosen to sit on a board concerned with promoting human rights education.

Speakers at the meeting included representatives of the Jewish community, gays, old people, blacks and women.

Jewish spokesperson Rhoda Kaellis said she is scared by the performance of the commission because Hitler's Germany evolved in the same manner

"Bigotry ranges from jokes to genocide. Jokes may be where it starts," she said.

"These people on the commission are official bigots. They are officially appointed bigots, appointed by our government."

Jesse Hilliard, spokesman for the Victoria Black Peoples Society said the commission reminded him of the Klu-Klux Klan in South Carolina.

"At least in South Carolina I knew where it was at," he said.

In an emotional plea, two representatives of the gay community said it's time homosexuals stood up for their rights.

"Gay people have got to learn to speak up," said Trish Lakes, a member of the Feminist Lesbian Action Group and a coaliton organizer.

Martin Bartlett told the gathering gay people should fight prejudice, no matter how overwhelming, if gay rights are to be won.

"What have I done to be considered untrustworthy, a liar and a criminal?" he said.

The human rights commission is a good idea, "but good ideas founder in the hands of stupid people," Bartlett said.

Meeting chairman Frank Preston, president of the Victoria Civil Liberties Association, said the objective of the meeting was to create a broader base in the community of people concerned about human rights.

The present commission is damaging efforts toward human rights in B.C. and public awareness and participation is needed to help replace it, Preston said.

Transport Jack-Knifes

The driver of a tractor trailer transporting a new 10-ton crane escaped serious injury Thursday when it jack-knifed on the Pat Bay Highway near the Royal Oak overpass.

Saanich police said driver Stephen Chila, 22, of Surrey was travelling to an equipment show at the Juan de Fuca Centre in Colwood when the crane came loose from its mountings and shifted.

The mishap occurred at 9:28 p.m.

Chila escaped with only a bump to his right knee but traffic on one lane of the highway was tied up for nearly three hours as another crane had to be brought in to secure the load.

Whiplash Gets Claim Chopped

VANCOUVER (CP) — A West Vancouver dentist who made a claim of almost $1 million for two traffic accidents has been awarded $22,744 in British Columbia Supreme Court.

Mr. Justice Harry McKay said in making the award to Dr. James Sweeney that while he had heard his share of exaggerated claims in personal injury actions, he had never "presided at as grossly exaggerated a claim as this one."

The judge said Sweeney claimed a substantial loss of income from 1975 to 1978, saying that he had been unable to do any of his work due to whiplash injuries suffered Nov. 11, 1974. The second accident occurred April 14, 1977.

Mr. Justice McKay said Sweeney claimed for future loss of income of $746,995 to $913,700 during the next 20 years.

However, the judge said that the plaintiff's net earnings ranged from $51,352 in 1970 to $91,741 in 1978.

Mr. Justice McKay said he accepted the evidence of two doctors that Sweeney suffered no significant disability from either accident, but with respect to the first mishap was unable to carry on the pedodontic side of his practice for a short while.

RN's Suspension Lifted by Judge

VANCOUVER (CP) — The suspension of a Sechelt, B.C. nurse after she administered penicillin to a patient allergic to that drug has been lifted.

However, Mr. Justice R. P. Anderson, in ruling that the suspension of Katherine Mason end May 10, said that her conduct "indicated a pattern of carelessness over a considerable period and that she failed to respond to advice or learn from experience."

Mrs. Mason, who was suspended from St. Mary's hospital 17 months ago, had appealed to the Registered Nurses Association of British Columbia, which upheld the suspension.

Mr. Justice Anderson said "the finding of guilt and the fact of the long suspension have served their purpose and no additional penalty should be imposed."

OFFICIAL COMMUNITY PLAN

Copies of the draft Plan are now available for collection from the Planning Department at the Saanich Municipal Hall between 8:30 A.M. and 4:30 P.M., Mondays through Fridays. Reference copies are available at the Public Libraries.

A Public Hearing will be held on June 27, 1979 to enable anyone to make a written and/or an oral presentation in support of, or in opposition to the Plan. The Plan has been reviewed in detail by the Lands, Planning and Housing Committee at Public Meetings. However, if anyone wishes to make further suggestions regarding the draft Plan, they should be submitted in writing to the Planning Department by June 1, 1979, so that changes can be made to the draft Plan prior to advertising the Public Hearing.

For further information or clarification of the content of the draft Plan, please call the Planning Department at 386-2241.

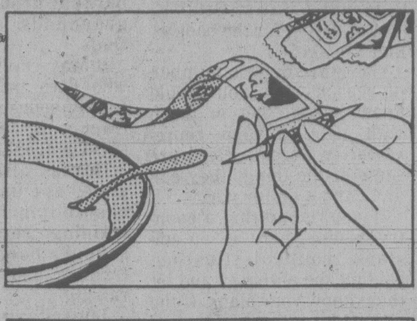
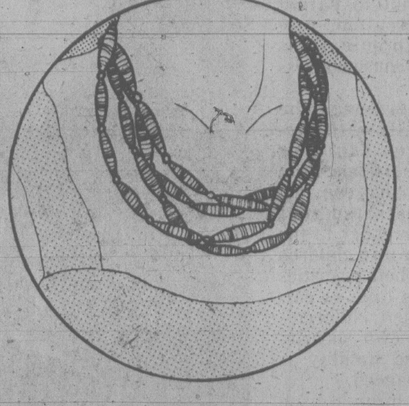
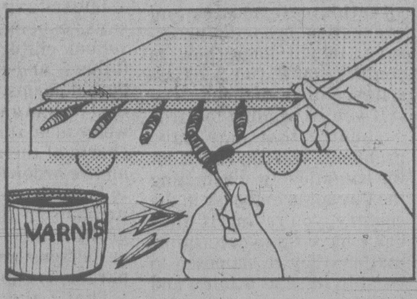
WIDE END OF PAPER SHOWING EDGES TRIMMED BACK







Kids, here's a necklace you can make for Mom or Grandma and you can do it all by yourself (with maybe just a LITTLE help from Dad or an older brother or sister). Mother Earth reader B. A. Bennett tells how:

Pull off a layer of the funnies from the Sunday paper. Open the double-sheet out flat on a hard surface (the kitchen floor or a table that it won't hurt to work on).

Then use a yardstick and a pencil to measure off and mark a series of dots. These dots start on the upper left corner of the paper right where the color begins. And they're spaced one and a half inches apart all the way across the double-sheet to where the color ends on the paper's right edge.

Next, draw a second series of dots across the paper's bottom. This series will be spaced one and a half inches apart, too, but it is started three-quarters of an inch in from where the color starts on the sheet.

(Do you see why the top row of dots starts in three quarters of an inch from the color's edge? It's so a series of long, skinny triangles will be formed when the dots are connected by straight lines.)

Now cut out the long, skinny triangles. You should get about 30 or 32 of them from the double-sheet of paper and each one should be approximately 20 inches long. (Don't worry about how many you get from a sheet or about how long they are. All newspapers are not the same size. Your triangles will be close enough to this "average" size to work. And if you don't cut enough from your first sheet of paper, you can cut a few more from another.)

You're now ready to roll your strips into beads. You'll need some round toothpicks and library paste (not glue) for this step.

Take one of the long strips and trim a little sliver off each side of its base. Not a lot — just enough to remove the points from the base's corners. Then lay the strip with its most colorful side down on a covered work surface. (It's important for you to cover your work surface with several layers of "regular" newspaper so you won't get paste on the floor or table.)

Next, "spot paste" the long paper triangle with small dabs of your adhesive. Don't use a lot of paste. Just space a spot of the adhesive every inch or so along the length of the triangle.

Then fold about one inch of the triangle's wide end over a toothpick and, using your fingernails to tuck it under, start to roll the paper onto the pack. Make it tight, but not so snug that you won't be able to get the toothpick out later!

As soon as you've wrapped a few turns around the toothpick, you can pick it up and continue rolling the paper between your thumbs and fingers. But just before you get to the end, stop and coat the "point" of the paper (on both sides) with paste that you've thinned with a little water. Then finish rolling the bead and pull the toothpick out.

The bead should be thickest in the middle. If it isn't, gently push one end or the other of the little roll of paper against a hard surface. That should fix it.

You'll need about 25 of the "paper jewels" to make a necklace. But be sure to roll up more than that so you can use only the very prettiest ones.

Let your beads dry for a day. Then stick a toothpick part way into each one so you have a handle and put at least two coats of varnish on (more coats will make the jewels shinier). The first coat should be a one-to-three mixture of turpentine and varnish (have Dad help you handle the turpentine). All additional coats that you apply should be just plain varnish.

When each bead is well coated, push the free end of its toothpick "holder" in between a magazine (or something) and a covered table to so the bead can hang in the air to dry. Or, you can glue the ends of a bunch of toothpicks along the edge of a board to make a rack that will hold a lot of beads at once!

Let the beads dry completely. Then string them on a plastic-coated polyfilament kite cord, monofilament fishing line, or a doubled-over (to make it stronger) piece of thread. If you want to, put a small colored "real" bead (that you can buy in novelty, craft, and fishing tackle shops) or a small button between every two of the beads you've just made. It makes a really pretty necklace!

You can make bigger and smaller and longer and shorter beads, too. Just cut fatter, skinnier, narrower or wider strips of paper. Experiment, and have fun. And when you give Mom and Grandma their necklaces (or three or four of them), you can tell them, "I made it myself!"

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Saul Levine, psychiatrist; Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: I am a 19-year-old girl and I am having great problems with my 21-year-old, immature sister. We can't stand the sight of each other. She is always making complaints to my mother and Mom takes her side and begins to give me some dirty looks.

I hate my sister so much that sometimes I just sit and stare at her with hostility. She is the type of person who only thinks of her precious little self.

I hate my sister so much there is no peace in the house. Because of our religion we have to live very loving, but there is no chance of us living like sisters.

I hate my sister so much I am thinking of killing myself, or moving out. My mother is not very understanding. We have never talked to each other like mother and daughter. Please help me because I am very confused.

ANSWER: Sometimes the "sibling rivalry" that we see between infants and toddlers never gets resolved. I'm sure many people feel uncomfortable at times because they haven't got the love for a sister or brother that is "expected" of them.

It would be great if sisters were close and loving, but there is seldom perfection in all aspects of our lives. Occasionally the personalities of siblings just clash; at other times discord is only one indication of family conflict and problems.

In your situation, it sounds like the problems between you and your sister have become serious. You talk about your "hate," which, paradoxically, is a strong emotion we often reserve for those we know best. You've also talked about your mother as being nonsupportive and distant from you.

There are basically two ways of approaching this. One is accept the fact that since you are 19, it is only just so long until you will be moving out, and then you will not have your two major antagonists to bother you. Another — and one that I prefer — is to see what can be done about the situation.

It you were to suggest to your family that you all seek family counselling at a local family service association do you think they would respond favorably? Sometimes the unexpressed thoughts we have are shared by other family members. Maybe your mother and sister also feel that they'd like to improve the situation.

If not, you might seek counselling for yourself. If you feel "trapped," a psychotherapist might help you to grow within yourself, give you strength and develop alternatives approaches.

DEAR DR. VICHERT: The only thing in life that I want — and I don't care if I die at it — is to become a race car driver. Because this is such a dangerous sport and because, if you're not really good you can't make a living at it, my parents refuse to help me. They are actually trying to stop me from attempting to succeed on my own.

I was going to take a race car drivers' course, but because my parents "only want the best for me," they refuse to give me any kind of support. I've had serious talks with them but it hasn't helped.

Believe me, this is the only thing in life I want and I won't settle for anything less.

ANSWER: You may never be able to convince your parents that they should support you in your desire to become "the world's greatest race car driver".

They can only see that their son, whom they love, wants to do something with his life that could result in his being seriously injured or killed, and they don't want to contribute to that goal. From their point of view that makes sense.

You will have to accept these feelings and try to understand that they are responding to their love for you.

If you are dedicated to become a race car driver you will have to look for ways to achieve this goal without the support of your parents. It might mean working harder, delaying the time you can start, and seriously assessing what you have to do yourself in order to achieve your goal. You may have to wait until you are old enough to leave home, get a job and earn your own money. You may have to work at a race track, or do whatever is necessary to provide the opportunities to achieve your goal.

One good quality of human beings is their remarkable ingenuity in finding ways to achieve a goal if one path is obstructed.

DEAR DR. COTTER: I have a very dear friend who I feel is being used. She is in Grade 10. There is a boy in Grade 12 she sometimes sees. He occasionally asks her out for walks and then tries to kiss her. The last time he tried to kiss her she said no. The next day he didn't smile, say hello or even wave to her.

ANSWER: I think she should say "good riddance" if he behaves like that after being refused a kiss. If that refusal made him sulk, he was only after the sensation of kissing. He is not some one who has any love for her as a person. She should forget about him.

Before you experiment with cleansers or try to scour off lime deposits or iron stains on porcelain bathroom fixtures, check to see what's available at a plumbing supply house. That's where plumbers buy powdered, porcelain-safe chemicals to remove lime and iron. Scouring porcelain can permanently damage the shine.

Wrap skirts, and dresses are popular this spring, but before you buy one, don't accept it after a quick try-on. Sit in it, reach up, bend over, take long strides. With such normal movements you might see more of your undergarments that you want to show off. Finding the best snaps or closures to remedy the gaposis may be a problem.

Troubles? Help Available

YOUTH ON THE MOVE

By LUCY IZON

There's more to preparation for a foreign trip than tickets, money and packing. Sometimes what you don't know can innocently land you in the middle of serious problems.

Take for example the situation of a fictitious young traveller named Dimitri. Dimitri is a 19-year-old Canadian citizen, although he was born here, his parents were born in Greece. While Dimitri tours Europe he plans to visit Greece to meet his grandparents. This is when Dimitri's problems could start.

It's quite possible that his parents also had him registered as a Greek citizen when he was born. If so, he could find himself eligible for military duty as soon as he enters that country.

I used Greece in this example, but similar situations have arisen in a number of countries. If you're in any doubt about your status as a dual citizen, contact the embassy or consulate of the country concerned before you depart Canada.

If you run into this type of situation while abroad contact your Canadian embassy or consulate immediately. Once you're there help is limited because the foreign country has full jurisdiction over persons it considers its citizens. Still, in a number of cases, the Canadian embassies have been able to arrange a number of hours grace for the person concerned to leave the country.

For any type of serious problem it's wise to have a list of the Canadian embassies and consulates abroad. It's possible to get one free by writing to Department of External Affairs, Ottawa, K1A 0G2. Ask for the booklet Bon Voyage.

There are quite a number of reasons why you should know how to get in touch with your Canadian representative abroad. Here are some of the things they can and cannot do for you:

If you're entering a country where there is an unstable political situation, contact the embassy and let them know your plans. If the situation deteriorates and evacuation becomes necessary, they'll know how to contact you if you need assistance in getting out.

If you're heading towards a country that may have problems, you can check out the situation by contacting the Canadian embassy in the country you're in. If they don't have up-to-date information, they're supposed to be able to send a telex and find out.

You can find out the same information before you leave Canada by contacting the Department of External Affairs.

If you wind up in serious legal trouble, you should contact your embassy immediately. They can't set aside local laws for you, but they can help you get legal counsel, contact your family, help you arrange money from home and try to help you get reasonable detention quarters. In most countries, being allowed to contact your embassy is your right under international law.

Over one-third of Canadians serving jail sentences abroad are here for drug offences, and the sentences can be far harsher than at home.

Peru's laws were recently changed, the minimum sentence for possession of cocaine is now 15 years. That's light compared to countries moving towards an Islamic legal code. In Iraq, Pakistan, Singapore and Saudi Arabia you can face a death pentalty for possession of hard drugs.

Dad, Try Surrendering To Charm of Children

elizabeth forbes

Last month, shortly after I told you about discussion groups formed in this area for women with pre-school children, a man called to tell me of efforts to form comparable groups for Dads, granddads and adopted Dads.

It was David Nordstrom, who does private practice family counselling and contract work for local social service agencies.

He has also had experience, not only in family counselling but in parent training, recreation, preschool, communications training and consciousness raising.

Those experiences, he says, especially with preschool children and their fathers, and particularly in parent co-ops, "has convincingly demonstrated that when men surrender to the charm of their own children and re-order their priorities to spend more time as participants in their children's growth, their own security as persons and stability as parents is enhanced."

That's the main reason this new project is developed around a father's day pre-school concept that involves father-child in pairs, and in creative, non-competitive activities.

Its titled Growing Together Times for Dads and Kids and the sponsors are Victoria Unitarian Church and the Canadian Commission on the International Year of the Child.

Primarily, Nordstrom says, the program combines fun time and discussion to recognize and develop the importance of Dads.

As project director he is ready to work with any interested individual or with organizations involved in early childhood education, to form groups in Greater Victoria or other places on Vancouver Island.

Only stipulations, in the case of participating organizations, is that they provide suitable space and equipment and that an on-going contact person is named as a co-leader.

The plan involves either four two-hour evening sessions or two four-hour (Saturday) workshops. And it features a broad selection of activities, such as non-verbal communications exercises, shared meal preparation and role modelling.

David Nordstrom plays 'Daddy Pile' with children

There is also general discussion and presentations for Dads only, to raise awareness, explore reactions and suggest alternatives,

"It's definitely a shared program for pre-school children and fathers to keep them growing together," Nordstrom stresses.

Asked to pinpoint some of the objectives, he starts with the need to explore and redefine the contemporary role of fathers and the act of fathering.

He believes the program is particularly important in fostering and developing the bond between very young children and their fathers, through using the preschoolers as models and facilitators in the creative growth of their own Dads.

He says he sees this project as the start of a process of mutual commitment to an on-going relationship that could help prevent family breakdown.

Over the long haul he also thinks this type of project could lead to the involvement of pre-school personnel in closer contacts with fathers.

Already Nordstrom has completed sessions and workshops with 30 pairs of Dads and two-to-five year old kids, in James Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt.

This week he started new groups at the Cool Aid Day Care Centre on Balmoral and in Gordon Head.

Upcoming on his itinerary are groups in Sooke, Langford, Duncan and Nanaimo.

If you are interested in getting in on this imaginative project for Dads and their pre-school children, further information is available from the Unitarian Church, telephone 385-2741, or from David Nordstrom, telephone 383-3364.

Background Rationale — When he made a formal request for approval and assistance from the Canadian Commission on the International Year of the Child, Nordstrom used two strong quotes that are worth remembering.

The first is from Culture and Commitments by Margaret Mead:

". . . the freeing of men's imagination from the past depends . . . on the development of a new kind of communication with those who are most deeply involved with the future — the young who were born in the new world.

". . . it depends on the direct participation of those who, up to now, have not had access to power and whose nature those in power cannot fully imagine.

". . We must learn together with the young how to make the next steps."

This quote which gives Mead's concept of prefigurative cultures, Nordstrom said, gives new meaning to his second quote — Wordsworth's line — The child is father to the man.

PUBLIC HEARINGS ON EDUCATION

COMMISSION ON EDUCATION
School District #61 (Greater Victoria)

The Commission on Education has now been officially established and is undertaking the tasks referred to it by the Board of School Trustees of Greater Victoria. A series of Open Hearings on the education programme of District 61, its objectives, and plans will be held according to the schedule below. All members of the public and organizations of the area are invited to present their views on these important matters at the sessions referred to. Such presentations may take the form of briefs, statements, petitions, oral comments, or individual interviews. Those planning to appear before the Commission to make their views, advice, or criticisms known are asked to notify the Commission Office at least a week before the date of the Hearing they plan to attend. The address is:

Booze Burns Calories? Nonsense

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Is there any truth to the idea that drinking Scotch before and during dinner burns up the calories that one eats? — MR. S.C.

DEAR MR. C:

That is a total misconception. Not even a liquor dealer could have told you that. Some time ago, a certain "diet of the month" was called "the drinking man's diet." For social drinkers and for less immoderate drinkers it sounded like heaven. Soon this fad diet went down the drain as not only ineffective, but potentially harmful.

Alcohol is a "food" and, like all other foods, contains a very specific number of calories. Consequently, it is impossible to disregard these caloric values if one is attempting to reduce. These hidden calories in alcohol are frequently overlooked by social drinkers, but they mount up, anyway.

The higher the alcoholic content and the greater the quantity, the greater are the number of calories consumed and the greater the increase in weight. It is estimated that two drinks, each containing two ounes of 86 proof Bourbon, would be equal to about 20 per cent of a daily caloric intake that most adults need for normal sustenance.

As for Scotch or any other alcoholic beverage burning up other calories, put that idea in the category of utter nonsense.

I constantly reiterate the basic rule of dieting from which there can be no departure. When the number of calories consumed is greater than the number of calories the body requires for daily activity, there must be a gain in weight. The reverse of this is, of course, also true. Only a rare or unusual hormone imbalance can affect this basic rule.

Our daughter is an ctive sportswoman. Unfortunately, she broke her leg in a skiing accident. The leg has healed and she is out of her cast. Her concern and mine, too, is that this will affect her ability to engage in sports from now on. In other words, will her leg be weaker for this experience? — Mrs. D.L.

DEAR MRS L:

More and more letters like yours are coming to me. I'm certain that the doctor who treated your daughter had told you that once a fracture heals completely, especially in young people, the bone can be considered as strong and as firm as it was before the injury.

Yet it must be remembered that, with a fracture, there is also injury to the tendons, ligaments and muscles which take a long time to heal. With active and passive massage and well-regulated exercise these, too, return to their normal, healthy condition.

When completely healed, a bone is not considered to be more vulnerable than it was prior to the accident.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with Tony for two years. I'm 35 and divorced, and Tony is 34 and never been married. He's a typical macho Italian type.

Tony has his pad and I have mine. He suggested giving up his place and moving in with me, but I told him nothing doing unless I get that ring on my finger. Now he's after me to marry him. I love him, Abby, but I can't trust him. When I'm at his place he always unplugs the telephone. I've also seen evidence of other women there. (Ladies clothes, cosmetics, etc.)

So what does a gal do when she loves a guy she can't trust? He says things could be different if we were married. What do you think?

—HUNG UP ON TONY

DEAR HUNG UP: A gal who loves a guy she can't trust doesn't know what misery is until she marries him. Things could be different all right. They could be WORSE. Hang on to your single blessedness.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have each called our own natural parents "Mom and Dad" since childhood. We live near his parents and, after several years I finally feel comfortable calling his parents "Mom and Dad," too.

When my mother heard me call my in-laws "Mom and Dad", she became very upset and said, "WE are the only Mom and Dad you will ever have, so please find some other names for your in-laws."

What is your advice, Abby?

— DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Tell your mother that calling your in-laws "Mom and Dad" in no way diminishes the very special love you have for your own parents. And furthermore, since YOU feel comfortable calling your in-laws "Mom and Dad," there is no reason to find other names for them.

DEAR ABBY: I have known this guy for two years, but we didn't get really serious about each other until seven months ago. I'm 18 and he's 19. He kept trying to get me to go to bed with him, and I kept saying no. Finally I gave in.

I really was in love with him, Abby. I'm no tramp. I thought it would bring us closer together. Maybe even get him to figure out some way we could get married.

Well, I was wrong. After that evening I didn't hear one word from him. Finally I ran into him by accident three weeks later, and his attitude toward me was completely different. He acted like a stranger.

I feel so cheap. If I had known then what I know now, I never would have given in. But there's nothing I can do about it now.

I wasted something very precious on someone who wasn't worth it and didn't appeciate it.

Please keep telling girls that the way to keep a guy is by NOT giving in to him. I wish I hadn't.

— SORRY.

DEAR SORRY: I will. And maybe your experience will help some other girl when she has that decision to make.

Mosel-Saar-Ruwer — one of the famous German wine-producing areas.
Vintage — (1977) the year when the grapes are picked.
Piesporter or Bernkasteler — the village from which the wine originates.
Goldtröpfchen — termed the "Queen of the Mosel" — is the best vineyard (einzlage) surrounding the village of Piesport.
Kurfürstlay — The grapes are selected from a group of adjoining vineyards (grosslage) surrounding the village of Bernkastel.
Riesling — Acclaimed as the world's most noble white wine grape.
Qualitätswein mit Prädikat — The highest category of German wine. Made from specially selected Riesling grapes — the grape's natural sugar content produces this superior wine. (Simple Qualitätswein without Prädikat may have sugar added.)
Kabinett — This special attribute is awarded to these elegant and fully ripened grapes. The lightest and driest of the Prädikat wines.
Rudolf Müller — The Müller family, which dates back to the 12th century — owns some of the best vineyards in Germany — your assurance of consistently fine wines.

Dockers Reject Pact By 1 Vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — A recount now shows that longshoremen at seven British Columbia ports have rejected a contract offer from the B.C. Maritime Employers' Association by one vote.

The recount was held after a vote two weeks ago in which members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union narrowly accepted the pact.

The contract would have given the 4,000 longshoremen a $2.70-an-hour wage increase over three years.

Offer Rejected at Endako

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Strikers in a violence-plagued dispute at Endako mines near here have voted against the latest offer from Placer Development Ltd.

About 150 members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers voted unanimously Thursday to reject the offer, a union spokesman said.

A union spokesman had said Wednesday that there would be no formal vote on the offer which the union negotiating team rejected during mediated discussions. Placer called it their final offer.

The company offered a 22.1 per cent wage increase over two years retroactive to Jan. 1 while the union, on strike since Feb. 14, wants a 29 per cent increase in wages and benefits in a 2½-year contract. Base rate now is $6.43 an hour.

Union president Jim Reid said strikers gave the negotiating committee a slight reprimand for presenting a company offer that did not contain an amnesty clause to prevent disciplinary action by the company. He also said no further talks are planned in the dispute.

Reid said the union is drafting an affidavit, protesting what it says is RCMP brutality at the mine site in some incidents earlier this week.

Three members of the union have lodged a complaint with the RCMP because a woman, the wife of a union member, was bitten by a police dog Tuesday when she crossed a road minutes before a convoy of trucks carrying molybdenum from the mine was to pass.

Man Crushed

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — Cecil Stein, 56, of Dawson Creek was killed Thursday when crushed between two trucks about 30 kilometres north of here.

103 Fires In Forests Last Week

Warm, dry weather sparked 103 new fires in B.C. forests last week, bringing the year's total to 185 compared with 56 for the corresponding 1978 period, the ministry of forests reported Thursday.

There were 76 fires still burning, including 30 in the Cariboo region and 22 in the Kamloops region where tinder-dry grass was creating a hazard, the ministry said.

Skipper's Ticket For Joy-Rider?

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — A 27-metre freight and passenger ferry was taken on a joy ride around the harbor before being grounded in a cove on Digby Island about three kilometres away.

The Canadian III, which is leased by British Columbia Ferries Corp. and provides service to the northcoast communities of Port Simpson and Kincloth, was not damaged in the incident, said Fred Bullen, Coast Guard district supervisor.

He said it was a miracle that there was no damage to the bottom of the vessel because the cove where it was grounded has a reputation for being difficult to enter even for much smaller boats.

Bullen suggested that, if the joy-rider is caught, he should be given a skipper's licence.

RCMP doubted, however, if the thief would be capable of maintaining the licence.

The Canadian III will resume its regular run today.

New Link For Wells

WELLS (CP) — Highway 26, the only road access out of this east-central British Columbia community, should be restored by Saturday, a highways ministry spokesman said Thursday.

An overloaded flat-bed truck crashed through the 65-metre, single-lane wooden bridge over the Cottonwood River Sunday, leaving 1,200 Wells and area residents stranded for a short time.

Workers have been installing a temporary bridge brought in Sunday.

Meanwhile, residents had to travel about 80 kilometres on an upgraded logging road to detour around the bridge.

Top Student Essays Open New Doors

The evolution of punk rock, politics in sports and Superman and the American identity are a few of the topics discussed in essays by 28 outstanding B.C. high school students chosen to present papers at the 13th annual B.C. Humanities and Science Symposium at the University of Victoria May 11-12.

The papers were selected from more than 310 submissions to the symposium, which is co-sponsored by UVic and B.C. Telephone.

Grade 11 and 12 students were invited to submit original papers or projects on topics of their choice for adjudicaton by UVic professors.

Multimedia projects include a study on the Beatles impact on society.

Selected students will attend the symposium all expenses paid, along with their teachers and 80 other students who submitted papers of high standards.

They will meet with university faculty members, exchange ideas with fellow students and also get a taste of university life.

During their visit the students will tour the campus, hear lectures and take part in workshops.

UVic creative writing professor and author William D. Valgardson will conduct a writing workshop for the students. UVic chemistry professor Dr. Reginald Mitchel will demonstrate fun chemical reactions in a chemistry show. The students will also hear several lectures.

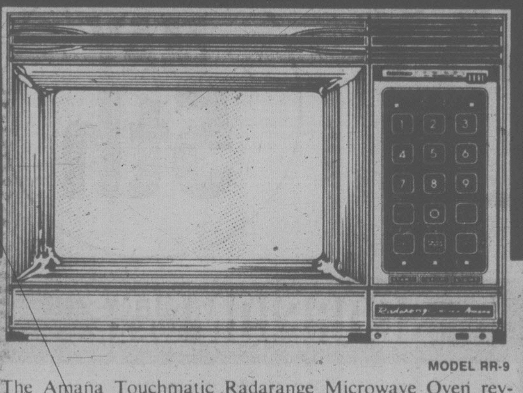
Does working late mean dinner's late?
Nope. Not if you've got an Amana Touchmatic Radarange. MICROWAVE OVEN



MODEL RR-9
The Amana Touchmatic Radarange Microwave Oven revolutionizes microwave cooking. Makes microwave cooking simple as 1-2-3.
- Amana COOKMATIC Power ShiftTM puts you in full control of everything you cook.
- Clean-up is quick, too, because you cook on serving plates, or paper plates!
- Only the food gets hot. So you and the kitchen stay cool.
- Stainless steel oven interior wipes clean in a jiffy, because splatters don't bake on.
- Big enough to roast a 20 pound turkey.
- Digital clock on the control panel displays the time in big bright numbers. When cooking, it's a split second timer that shows remaining cooking time. Then when cooking's done —it "remembers" and displays the time of day . . . automatically.
- The Radarange oven saves energy. Uses 50 to 75% less electricity than a conventional range!

Chapman hopes to keep job, whiskers

Bearded Safeway Clerk Clipped

WINNIPEG (CP) — Don Chapman is fighting attempts by Canada Safeway Ltd. to get him to shave off his beard.

Chapman, a 15-year employee of the company, was suspended without pay for three days in March after he refused to part with his whiskers.

The case goes to an arbitration board later this month, and Bernard Christophe, president of Local 832 of the Retail Store Employees Union, says he's ready to go to the Manitoba Human Rights Commission if the board rules against Chapman.

"We're not suggesting people should look ragged like bums," Christophe said. "But as long as the beard is trimmed and in good shape, it should be OK."

A spokesman for Safeway refused comment on the matter.

Chapman grew the beard last summer when the union was on strike, but denies he's simply out to make trouble.

"I like my beard and so does my girl friend."

He said he was told beards are against company policy after the strike ended, but nothing more was said of his beard until March.

Never Thought to Ask If RCMP Involved - Goyer

OTTAWA (UPC) — Former solicitor-general Jean-Pierre Goyer testified it never crossed his mind to ask whether the RCMP was involved in the 1972 break-in of Montreal offices of a radical newsaper.

"You had to understand the thinking of the time," Goyer told the McDonald Royal Commission on RCMP wrongdoing Thursday. "The Quebec minister of justice Jerome Choquette had just issued a statement saying the Quebec provincial police and the Montreal police were not to blame but he was launching an investigation anyways."

Four years later, an RCMP officer testifed the force had actually broken into the offices.

"My first reaction was that the L'Agence de press libre du Quebec was not a new organization — it was already under surveillance by security services for a few months," Goyer said.

Goyer told the hearing he was told by the RCMP three weeks after the Oct 6th break-in that "no acknowledgement" of a telegram warning him of the theft of 1,000 documents and forms was needed.

The members were actively involved in subversive activities and in contact with Front de Liberation du Quebec cells and political terrorists abroad, Goyer told the hearing.

The Montreal lawyer, who quit politics last year, said he had no "sympathy" with the organization and didn't bother to question the RCMP when the telegram was received.

"When I was told not to bother to answer, I was not surprised and not upset. These people's rights were not being violated but after all they weren't the same type of organization as the Knights of Columbus or the Rotary Club — they weren't a bona fide organization."

Goyer said it never crossed his mind the RCMP was involved in the break-in and if he took the word of a terrorist group in a telegram over the RCMP — "then it would throw everything upside down."

And it didn't upset him that the reputation of the RCMP would be ruined by stories in newpapers linking the force to the break-in.

"Even if it had, I would think 80 per cent of 100 people surveyed would have thought it was right for them (the RCMP) to do so."

Winnipeg Police To Strike?

WINNIPEG (UPC) — With the possibility of a police strike here as early as next week, Manitoba Attorney-General Gerry Mercier said the province was prepared to use RCMP and armed forces to police the capital.

The city's negotiations with the Winnipeg Police Association over a new contract remained deadlocked Thursday. The 1,100-member association has been working to rule since Wednesday.

Deputy Mayor Bill Norrie denied talks had broken down. "Our hope is that discussions will continue," he said.

Drug Sold In Canada

OTTAWA (UPC)— Some over-the-counter cold remedies sold in Canada contain the drug methapyrilene which an American study indicates causes liver tumors in rats.

Dr. A.J. Liston of the Health Protection Branch said he would advise consumers not to use such remedies until the government evaluates the U.S.report.

BRIAN SMITH ON PROVINCIAL AFFAIRS

POLICE AND THE PUBLIC

In the past year Canadians have heard unfavourable reports concerning some of the activities of our national Police Force, particularly in the field of security measures taken within the Province of Quebec.

What is so often over-looked by critics of our Police Forces is that we live in a country which generally has been served in an exemplary way by its police, both at the local and national level.

My experience with the police in this Province is extensive. In addition to being Chairman of the Oak Bay Police Board, I have practised in the field of criminal law for many years and have often prosecuted and defended in major criminal trials, including murder and commercial fraud. My experience with our local police forces has left me with the impression that their members are generally, dedicated, honest, professional and fair. Too often we fail to accord them the credit and tribute that they deserve from the community.

I am a firm believer and supporter of police programmes which are bringing the police into close daily contact with their community. Programmes such as school liason, public education and Neighborhood Watch have been highly successful in acquainting citizens and involving them directly in the work performed by our police officers.

I am in favour of the work of the B.C. Police Commission in standardizing and upgrading equipment and training.

I remain an advocate of co-operation and unification of specialized investigative services and functions between the various police forces of Greater Victoria. My experience tells me that it is high time we acknowledge the contribution made to the welfare of our community by our police.

Waldheim More Optimistic On Reunification of Korea

PYONGYANG (AP) — United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said Thursday North Korean President Kim Il-sung has offered new initiatives aimed at breaking the impasse in talks to reunify the two Koreas and has pledged not to attack South Korea.

"My impression is that there are some openings, some possibilities," Waldheim told reporters after meeting with the 67-year-old president at his palace here.

Waldheim declined to be specific, but UN sources said Kim indicated "a certain flexibility" in his long-standing position that there is no role for South Korea in negotiations to replace the armistice that ended the Korean War.

The North has said that only the United States should be involved in such discussions because it is the main component of the UN peacekeeping force stationed on the divided peninsula.

Waldheim, who was invited to visit both Koreas by their leaders, said "much depends on my talks in Seoul," where he heads today for a two-day visit.

"I think the talks in Korea have gone better than expected," he said of his meeting with Kim.

Waldheim said later on a flight to Tokyo for an overnight stop before going to South Korea that two major issues came up in his Pyongyang talks. The first was procedures for discussing reunification of divided Korea and the other was the replacement of the armistice agreement.

"I told President Kim that what we need now is a practical approach, to find a way out of the dilemma," the secretary-general said.

U.S. State Department Gets Jonestown Blame

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. state department was guilty of inefficiency and mismanagement prior to the Jonestown mass suicide-murder in Guyana last year, a government report said Thursday.

But the report, prepared by retired state department officers, said it was impossible to conclude whether better performance by the department could have prevented the tragedy.

American officials in Guyana and in Washington were handicapped by "basic lack of police or investigative authority" in pursuing initial clues about the nature and intent of the commune and its leader, Jim Jones.

That authority lay with the Guyanese government, which rejected allegations by former Peoples Temple members that Jones was a dangerous maniac who was leading his followers toward death, the report said.

The report by John Crimmins and Stanley Carpenter said the single most serious error by the state department occurred in June, 1978.

At that time, the report said, U.S. Ambassador John Burke cabled the department in Washington and asked for authority to speak to Guyanese officials about exercising greater control over the commune. But the department refused, saying it was fearful the Peoples Temple would allege harassment.

Throughout the period leading to the tragedy, commune members and their lawyers were vigorous protesters whenever they felt the government was interfering with their rights, the report said.

Temple members used the Freedom of Information Act to gain access to departmental cables for use as evidence to back their claims.

The report found the department gave "very little" attention to a petition from relatives of the Jonestown commune members which asked U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance to act, and which accused Jones of running a "concentration camp."

Then, in May, Deborah Layton Blakey defected from the commune and asked the U.S. embassy in Guyana for help in leaving the country. She was given an emergency passport and a ticket out of the country.

In conversations with the embassy staff and in a signed statement, Ms. Blakey said Jones was conducting mass suicide rehearsals and was "stage-managing" visits by U.S. officials to the commune to hide evidence of his coercion, the report said.

She expanded on her allegations in a conversion during the flight to Richard McCoy, the U.S. consul. McCoy advised Ms. Blakey against telling the media about her allegations, suggesting she tell the FBI or some other law enforcement agencies instead.

McCoy passed on some of Ms. Blakey's account to the department in Washington. Her signed statement was never forwarded by the embassy.

McCoy's oral report had little impact, partly because he dismissed the allegations of suicide rehearsals as "nonsense," the study said.

Crimmins and Carpenter said the department may have had some suspicion that Ms. Blakey was misleading them about the temple, perhaps at Jones' instigation. "No one could grasp the idea of mass suicide, and it was given no credence," the report said.

Dancers Earn Trip

Three pupils of the local Adeline Duncan Highland Dance Studio will compete in the Canadian championships July 15 in Antigonish, N.S.,

They qualified to compete by placing high in the B.C. provincial championships in Vancouver.

Jennifer Lindsay of Sidney took first place in the under-16 junior class. Janice Hope of Victoria was runner-up in the under-13 juvenile class and Tracy Curtis, also of Victoria, was runner-up in the under-11 class.

Who does a better job for British Columbians? Four vital signs of economic activity are displayed here. ☐ You compare. The Socreds themselves admit failure. In the Economic Development Ministry's 1978 Review and Outlook, they concede that unemployment will increase even further this year. ☐ They have turned to massive tax and rate increases to compensate for their economic errors. They raised the tax burden on your family substantially. ☐ And they have doubled ferry rates, upped hospital and ambulance charges, and increased auto insurance rates. ☐ A promise of better things is one thing. Delivering what you promise is another. The NDP has proven that its economic program works. ☐ You judge.

China Plans Cutbacks

PEKING (UPI) — China's top leaders apparently have decided to modify their ambitious modernization program in a move that could have major economic and political repercussions for the communist giant.

Chairman Hua Kuo-feng, in a meeting with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, gave an indication of the decisions reached at a recent secret meeting of the Communist Party's Politburo.

"Starting from 1979, we are shifting the focus of our work to a modification program (of economic goals), so China needs an international environment of peace in order to build up our country," Hua told Waldheim.

Though Hua did not specifically say the "modification" will mean cutbacks in the modernization campaign, it coincided with an editorial in major Peking newspapers praising the economic principle of "first retreat, then advance."

One unresolved question was the impact the changes in the modernization program may have on its architect, Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping, who already has survived two purgings in power struggles.

Diplomatic analysts and China-watchers based in Hong Kong speculated Teng and his supporters could be coming under fire for shortcomings in the overly ambitious economic program unveiled in March, 1978.

China's plans for full agricultural mechanization by 1980, production of 60 million tons of steel in 1985 and a vast capital construction program already have been scaled back.

In addition to the possibility of a political reshuffle, the program modifications could have an impact on Western businessmen who have been lining up to sell China billions of dollars of worth of projects.

If China has in fact decided it must suspend or cancel lucrative projects such as hotels, upgrading its airports and new factories, the Western businessmen could lose out.

China's official media in recent days has spoken of the need for making hard decisions on what the cash-strapped nation can afford.

The closed-doors meeting of the Communist Party leaders that approved the modifications reportedly also laid the groundwork for a session of the National People's Congress later this month to rubber-stamp the leaders' decisions.

Hung and Teng were seen together this week attending an opera performance in the Great Hall of the People with Waldheim, who ended his official visit later in the day and flew to North Korea.

Also at the opera was Party Vice Chairman Wang Wang Tung-hsing who had not been seen in public for about a month, raising speculation the former bodyguard to the late Mao Tse-tung had been sacked in a power struggle.

Korea 'Tube' Visual Treat

PYONGYANG (AP) — Marble columns, crystal chandeliers, paintings, bas-relief and mosaics; plenty of space and very little noise — this is the Pyongyang subway, a visual treat — and a political experience.

Each of the 15 stations on the North Korean capital's two subway lines features a different political message from the life of President Kim Il-sung.

Subway riders also are treated to broadcasts from the central station as they ride the escalator to the platform and revolutionary music on the train. The daily newspaper is stapled to a bulletin board in every station.

At Restoration Station, a large statue of Kim Il-sung in military dress watches over the passengers from a special alcove. The guide, a young girl in a blue uniform, explained that it portrayed the president "during the anti-Japanese guerrilla struggle" in the Second World War.

At Construction of the Fatherland Station with fluted marble columns, a large picture in the special alcove shows Kim just after the Japanese occupation ended in 1945. "The great leader is turning the first spade of earth to reform the great nation," the guide said.

At Reconstruction Station the alcove picture portrays Kim with a map and surveying equipment. A skyscraper is being built in the background and people in front are climbing a hill and waving banners saying, "Let us go out for the construction of the fatherland which we keep with our blood." The guide said the scene took place just after the Korean War ended in 1953. The U.S. part in the war was never mentioned.

At Golden Harvest Station, Kim is shown standing in a field of grain in the mid-1960's. The guide said the president was satisfied with the country's "great victory in agriculture and great harvest."

For the equivalent of about six cents passengers can ride the entire 25-kilometre-long subway system. Han Hin-soo, mast of Restoration Station, said it varied between 185-and 275-metres deep because Pyongyang was once the site of a lake and engineers had to go below the water table.

Han said 200,000 people use the system daily during its operating hours of 6 a.m. to 1 a.m. The first section opened in 1973 and another section is being built but nobody seems to know when it will be finished or where it is.

The design of the system resembles the Moscow underground, but Han and the guides denied that the Russians had a hand in the planning or the construction.

"We built this ourselves with our own materials, by our own technology and especially our own brains," Han said. He said this was in perfect keeping with President Kim's spirit of self-reliance.

Oil-from-Coal South Africa Hedge

By CARYLE MURPHY

SACUNDA, South Africa (WP) — Here amid shimmering acres of leafy green stalks in South Africa's rustic corn belt, North American construction know-how has linked up with South African ingenuity to build this country's most important insurance policy against a future world oil embargo.

Sasol Two will be the world's largest plant producing commercial oil from coal when it is completed next year at a cost of $2.8 billion.

The massive complex is designed to guarantee South Africa at least a minimum supply of gasoline and other strategic fuels from its abundant coalfields if international hostility to its racial discrimination ever results in a ban on the flow of imported oil.

The strategic importance of the Sasol project to South Africa, which has no known domestic oil reserves, was underscored last month when, in reaction to Iran's decision to discontinue supplying South Africa with oil, government officials announced that construction of Sasol Three, at an estimated cost of $3.8 billion, would begin as soon as Sasol Two is completed.

The Fluor Corp., based in Irvine, Calif., the builder of stations on the Alaska pipeline project, holds the management contract for Sasol Two. Officials of the giant construction company, which has also helped build two oil refineries in South Africa, refuse to say how much the contract is worth.

Predictably, Fluor was chosen by South Africa to construct Sasol Three, with a completion date of 1982. It will be located at Secunda next to Sasol Two.

Under the hot sun of South Africa's highvelt, the Afrikaans name for this corn-growing plateau, construction of Sasol Two is at its peak. Among the 20,000 workers are 300 Americans, mostly engineers. With their families, they live at the project's prefabricated town of Secunda, a two-hour drive from Johannesburg.

Necessity has been the midwife of these expensve projects. Without a drop of oil of its own, and threatened by repeated calls for an oil embargo by Third World countries in addition to increasing pressure from its Western allies to modify its political system of apartheid, South Africa has had to regard the cutoff of imported oil as a real possibility.

South Africa began planning for the day when an international oil boycott might materialize as far back as the 1950s. The state-run South Africa coal, oil and gas corporation (known as Sasol) built a tiny pilot oil-from-coal plant — Sasol One — at Sasolburg in 1955. In 1974 it decided to construct the much larger Sasol Two.

South Africa also began to build oil reserves in 1966, pouring the precious commodity into abandoned coal mines east of Johannesburg and Pretoria on the country's industrial plateau, and in the western Cape. Informed observers estimate that the reserves could meet South Africa's needs at present consumption for about 18 months to two years, possibly longer with strict rationing.

Sasol's executives admit that around 40 per cent of the entire cost of the Sasol project, more than $6.6 billion, will be spent abroad. Thus, strategic though it may be, the project is still greatly dependent on Western technology, loans and equipment, making it vulnerable to anti-apartheid moves in the West to curb private investment and business ventures in South Africa.

The major problem for the South African government now, however, is how to finance Sasol Three. For the first time, the government has invited private financing for almost a third of the project's cost.

Fishing For Gold

KENT, Wash. (AP) — Panning for gold in Mill Creek is no flash-in-the-pan exercise for Bill Fortune.

Within sight of homes and city streets, Fortune dredges up a few speckles of gold in the four-foot-wide creek — to the amazement of skeptical onlookers.

"It's just like fishing — it's an excuse to get away, to enjoy the outdoors. You'd be surprised how many of your troubles you can wash right down your arms and into the sand," says the 60-year-old retired railway mail clerk and Kent shopkeeper.

"Actually, most people who pan gold would rather die than sell their gold. They want to put it on the mantel as a conversation piece."

And there isn't much gold to put on the mantel. . .

Third World Countries Pose Shipping Threat

By ICHIRO NAKAGANA

LONDON (Reuter) — Major western shipping countries, plagued by the worst depression since the Second World War and troubled by increases in Eastern bloc tonnage, could soon face a far more serious threat from Third World nations.

If plans by the United Nations to increase the Third World's shipping industry are accepted at the fifth session of the UN Conference on Trade and Development opening next week in Manila, dire effects for the West are predicted.

According to calculations made by a British shipping journal, Greece might stand to lose up to 90 per cent of its tanker fleet, including almost all its large crude carriers. Reductions in its dry bulk carrier fleet could be as high as 95 to 97 per cent.

Norway might also suffer badly, with up to 94 per cent of its tanker and 87 per cent of its bulk carrier tonnage at risk.

Two-thirds of Britain's bulk carrier fleet could be put out of business and its fleet of super tankers could be cut to half its present size, the journal warned.

"This is just ridiculous," one London shipping official said. "The world will be thrown into chaos with the economic interests of major nations irretrievable damaged."

The UN scheme, drawn up by the conference secretariat, calls for "equitable participation" by developing countries in the transport by sea of oil and other bulk cargoes generated by their own trade.

It also proposes measures to phase out flag-of-convenience operations over a period of years.

The proposals come from an argument that flag-of-convenience ships do not contribute to a developing country's economy since they draw away a potential earning source of foreign currencies.

The Lloyd's Shipping Economist Journal warns that the proposals would lead to a massive upheaval in the structure of the world's maritime industries.

The Lloyd's report, which studies the likely effects of the plans, says even France, with a much smaller merchant fleet than Greece, Norway and Britain, would lose 15 per cent of its tanker fleet.

The report says that developing countries, except those belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries may have problems in building up their bulk fleets to share in trading as suggested by the secretariat. Finance would be the biggest hurdle.

The development of national flag fleets would be "at the expense of free and efficient flow of world trade," an independent consulting group in the United States says.

It says only certain countries, mostly oil producers, would benefit from restricting trade in bulk carrying to national flag policies.

"Many other developing and developed countries seem to be the losers. Freight rates and delivered prices rise. Exports decrease. Balance of payments deficits worsen.

"Developing countries now benefitting from open registry through jobs, shipbuilding, ship repair, registry income, etc., are hurt," the group concludes.

1. To assure ten tricks, draw two rounds of trumps, ruff dummy's nine of diamonds, and lead a low club. If North follows low, finesse the eight! Even though South wins the eight with the nine or ten, he must hand you the contract, whatever he returns.

Thus, a club return would go right into dummy's K-J and permit you to eventually discard a spade from dummy on your ace of clubs, while a spade return from the South quarter would end the play that much sooner. A diamond return would also be fruitless, since it would allow you to ruff in your hand and discard a spade from dummy.

The outcome would be the same if North produced the nine or ten when you played a low club toward the K-J-8. You would cover with the jack and attain an equally impregnable position.

2. The contract is certain if you play correctly. All you have to do to insure a favorable outcome is to enter dummy with a low heart to the king, lead the queen of diamonds and finesse. If the queen loses to the king, North cannot return a spade or a heart without handing you the crucial ninth trick. If he returns a diamond or a club instead, you simply force out the ace of clubs to assure nine tricks.

If the queen of diamonds finesse wins at trick three, you abandon the suit and shift your attention to clubs, forcing out the ace. Again you are sure of at least nine tricks.

If you were to lead a club at trick two, which is tempting, you could wind up with your arm in a sling. South might win with the ace, return a spade, and the contract would then be up for grabs.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, May 5, 1979
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21 - Apr. 19): Find new ways of achieving basic goals. Steady pace means more than sensational scheme. Leo, Aquarius individuals could figure prominently. Keep diet, health resolutions. You are due to meet a very important person — the contact could change your life.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 - May 20): Individual you took for granted comes up with surprise proposal. Be receptive, willing to hurdle red tape. The rules, regulations will bend in your favor. Know it and act accordingly. Aquarius, Cancer and Capricorn persons play key roles.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Avoid scattering your forces; focus on basic issues. Accent quality material, dialogue with older, authority figure and potential for security. Virgo, Sagittarius persons fill roles in scenario.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): Unorthodox procedure is most apt to result in success. Mail, message or call could provide key to greater freedom. Relative probably is sincere, but could be misinformed. Know it and respond accordingly.

LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): What you have been striving for is practically handed to you on proverbial silver platter. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Accent on change, travel, variety — and money. You'll be handsomely rewarded for creative endeavors.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Obtain valid hint from Leo message. Be direct, confident and imprint your individual style. Lead rather than follow. Judgement, intuition are on target. Domestic tranquility could replace emotional fireworks.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Temporary confinement should not be cause for brooding or alarm. Clandestine arrangement works to your advantage. Pisces, Virgo persons play key roles. Define terms, check source material. Avoid self-deception.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21): Relationship is intensified — nothing is apt to occur halfway or in tepid manner. Spotlight on creativity, involvements, decisions concerning hopes, wishes and love. This can be your power-play day. Know it and proceed accordingly. Stick with number 8.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): A new relationship is established with professional superior. You know about room at bottom — now, space is made for you at top. Illustrate views, beliefs in graphic manner. Be independent, not arrogant. A Leo could show you the way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Original or "new" methods are most likely to achieve purpose. Stress is on communication, education, special study, enlightenment concerning language and spirituality. A dynamic, attractive person comes into your life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Delve beneath layers of superficiality. Go after answers concerning contracts, affiliations, budget, taxes, financial obligations affecting one close to you. Another Aquarian figures prominently. You can be finished with fear based on superstition.

PISCES (Feb. 19 - Mar. 20): You can now extricate yourself from intolerable commitment. Know it and act accordingly. Be versatile, accept social invitation. Expand horizons. Discuss key issues with partner or mate. Gemini individual figures prominently.

IF MAY 5 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are restless, creative, bright, attractive, spoiled by the opposite sex. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play key roles in your life. Your intellectual curiosity is honed to razor-sharpness. You are never satisfied merely to know something occurred. You want to know why, the reasons. You go after the story behind the story. Journalism, writing, teaching, photography appeal to you. Social work, aiding others to overcome their anxieties also are a part of what makes you click.

"Jack and Eve have birthdays next month," said Peter. "Any ideas about gifts?"

Sally shook her head. "In February? I'd forgotten, but they've both got everything anyway. Do you remember the actual dates?"

"Sure. Jack's comes first, and I've figured out something," Peter replied. "The sum of all the dates after his will be just five times the sum of those before Eve's birthday in the month."

What were the dates?

WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine
all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

Seedlings Spurt Ahead

Somewhat higher temperatures at night during the past week have noticeably quickened the growth of seedling vegetables already through the soil.

Broad beans have doubled their height and thickened out with sideshoots. These beans were not sown until Feb. 21 but already show thick tip clusters of leaves probably sheltering flower buds.

We allow side shoots to develop on broad beans because in our clay loam which we consider rich soil, they lengthen the picking time into early June if weather is not too warm.

The dwarf laxton's Progress peas have been given 18-inch stakes for support. We realize this in only possible for a small sowing but since they have tendrils like taller peas we find the plants grow more quickly and produce more pods when encouraged to be upright.

A little extra soil is laid over the root area of peas after a good watering to help retain moisture around the roots.

Thinning of small-seeded vegetables needs some attention even though sown as thinly as possible.

White turnips at this season are grown mostly for their tender green leaves so filled with vitamins and minerals. These seedlings receive only a token thinning until enough leaves develop to make a small picking. A sowing about mid May will be grown for the tender small white turnips which are as edible raw as young radishes.

With carrots, thinning must begin early — that means when not much more than an inch high. Carrot growth, and beets too, needs to be unchecked in the early stage particularly. Their growth must be continuous.

First thinning may be to about half-inch apart. Remember to press gently with finger on each side of remaining carrot seedling to ensure a minimum of root disturbance.

To lessen attraction to carrot-rust-fly, put discarded carrot seedling into a container as you work. They go to the compost pile where the odor of the leaves will attract the fly if it is already around. Since no carrot root is attached to the little bit of foliage, there is nowhere for the fly's eggs to develop if laid in the vicinity, and the row crop will be safe from that fly at least.

Gardeners who still use the so-called old fashined but most economical ground coffee and loose tea can spread this used material alongside carrot rows, where its odor will help to mask the odor of carrot foliage. The humus value is in being a shield to the soil beneath from direct sun and wind which take moisture from the soil.

Crushed mint leaves are another means of masking plant odors which attract unwanted insects. Scatter some fresh crushed leaves along the carrot row.

A few leaves crushed and scattered around young cabbage seedlings each day will help protect them from the egg laying cabbage white butterfly; you notice them searching for the plants and then veer away quite distracted. It pays to keep the odor fresh daily.

It is unfortunate that the carrot-rust fly is not as visible as the butterfly so that we amateurs are unaware of its presence. However, small flies similar to houseflies but not nearly so active have been observed near carrots, crawling on the soil. Their color is exactly that of the soil so can be easily overlooked.

Thinning and cultivating carefully between rows is best done from ground level on the knees with small hand tools. Only thus can we see what is going on down there among our vegetable plants.

Que. Asbestos Talks Denied

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPC) — The U.S. parent firm of Asbestos Corp., one of Canada's largest asbestos producers, says Quebec has never made any offer of "substance" to purchase the company and it protests the government's intention to expropriate the firm.

Quebec Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said, during his announcement in the provincial legislature Wednesday, that after months of negotiations the government and the parent firm General Dynamics were still far apart on a per share agreement for Asbestos, in which the St. Louis, Mo., firm holds 55 percent interest.

"We are still open to negotiations if the Quebec government requests," General Dynamics spokesman Peter Connolly said Thursday.

"It is unfortunate that the Quebec government has announced their intention to implement legislation to expropriate Asbestos Corp. without ever having conducted any meaningful negotiations or having made any offer of substance.

"We will utilize all available means to protect our interest of the minority shareholders of Asbestos Corp."

Parizeau said Wednesday the Parti Quebecois government would reintroduce the necessary legislation empowering it to expropriate Asbestos Corp. of Canada.

The Quebec government had offered $42 a share — a total offer of between $116 million and $125 million — but General Dynamics sought $100 per share for its 55 percent interest in Asbestos.

The government had brought in legislation Dec. 15, 1978 if negotiations for an acceptable purchase price were unsuccessful. The bill died on the order paper when the legislature adjourned for the Christmas recess.

Provision was made for a three-man arbitration board to set an acceptable price. The board would be comprised of company and government representatives with a third party acceptable to both. The arbitrators' decision would have been subject to appeal through normal legal channels.

General Dynamics contended at the time that Asbestos was a federally chartered company and as such its shares could not be expropriated by Quebec.

Error Causes Another N-Plant Malfunction

WASHINGTON (WP) — A nuclear reactor malfunction, including some of the same elements that caused the near-disaster at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania, caused the shutdown of a New Jersey power plant Wednesday afternoon, officials of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission announced Thursday.

A combination of erroneously closed valves, conflicting instrument readings and signals that went ignored resulted in a "triple low" water level over the radioactive fuel core of the nuclear reactor at the Oyster Creek plant near Toms River, N.J., the NRC was told at a staff briefing.

The holding company that owns Oyster Creek is the same one that owns Three Mile Island. Beginning at 1:53 p.m. Wednesday the water was no higher than 4 feet 8 inches above the top of the core for at least 30 minutes and may have fallen lower than that, the officials said, possibly exposing the core.

However, no radiation was released into any of several water and air samples taken at the site, indicating that there was no damage to the core. The reactor was cooled and depressurized to cold shutdown by 10:20 p.m. Wednesday and will remain shut until the incident is investigated, according to Norman Moseley, chief of the NRC's reactor operations inspection branch.

The Oyster Creek reactor was built by the General Electric Co. in 1969 for Jersey Central Power £ Light Co., which is owned by General Public Utilities Co., the same holding company that owns Three Mile Island's utility. The plant produces about 25 percent of Jersey Central's peak power load to some 677,500 customers.

NRC officials gave the following description of the event:

The Oyster Creek reactor is of the "boiling water" type in which the cooling water that circulates around the core boils directly into steam that then drives a turbine to produce electricity. As the water passes through the turbine, it condenses back to water and recirculates to be heated again at the core. The system at any time is part water and part steam.

Maintenance work being done on the plant somehow caused a "spurious high pressure signal" to go off, which caused the reactor to "scram," or shut down, at 1:50 p.m. Wednesday. Residual heat kept the water boiling away, but for some reason five valves in the system had been shut so it could not flow back from the turbines.

One had been shut for maintenance, two were shut for unknown reasons, and the last two were inexplicably closed by the operators during the incident, the NRC was told.

The water level over the core kept dropping, but at the time of the "triple low," which was the "limit of safety," according to one official, "The operator was looking at ... water-level indicators that were telling him the water level was all right."

At that point, automatic bypass lines opened around the shut valves and brought cooling water back to the core. Normal circulation was re-established 36 minutes into the incident, and the reactor was gradually brought to cold shutdown by 10:20 p.m.

The NRC regional office was notified of the event at 1:20 p.m. but nobody at Oyster Creek was apparently aware there had been a triple-low water level until sometime in the evening. Darrel Eisenhut, deputy director of the NRC's operating reactors division, said he learned of the low level at 11:40 p.m. at home.

This was apparently because the computerized event recorder, which automaticaly lists the changes in any instruments, had been shut off by the operators sometime during the incident. Officials said this may have been because the operators thought there was no further event to record or simply because "it was spewing paper all over the floor."

Rep. Andrew Maguire D-N.J., told the NRC he regarded the event as "a most serious incident" in which "a crisis was very nearly upon us once again." He said he would sponsor investigations to parallel those into the incident at Three Mile Island.

THE MYTHICAL Greek who drowned in the sea because his wings made from feathers and wax melted when he flew too close to the sun would likely have envied Larry Mauro, of Riverside, Calif., shown here in the cockpit of his solar-powered aircraft. The craft is powered by silicon solar cells installed on wingtops, which feed electrical current to a battery pack at base of cockpit.

Radiation Dose Twice Earlier Guesstimates

WASHINGTON (WP) — The collective radiation dose to people living within 50 miles of the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant accident was at least twice as high as previously estimated, but the level was still so low that almost no health damage should occur, federal officials said Thursday.

At a Senate subcommittee hearing Thursday, Health Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. said that based on the new data "we would expect one additional cancer death" and "one non-fatal cancer" above normal from the two million people living around the Pennsylvania nuclear facility. He added that some scientists using the same data would predict up to 10 new cancer deaths and an additional 10 non-fatal cancers.

At the same time, officials admitted, the data they have is so sketchy that they have no way of telling how much radiation any one individual might have received. Thus their estimates of health effects are really only educated guesses.

The difficulty in setting the extent of radiation exposure, they said, came from the limited number of radiation measuring devices that were working outside the plant site during the first three days after the accident began when most radiation was released.

As reported at the time by The Washington Post the 17 thermal luminescent dosimeters (TDLs) maintained by Metopolitan Edison Co., were, during the initial key days, the only devices within 12 miles of the plant used to determine the off-site exposure.

The first of some 200 federal government TDLs were not put in place until most of the radiation releases had ended.

The cumulative radiation exposure figure obtained from TDLs is important in setting dose rates, which in turn are needed to estimate future health risks to the population.

Brezhnev's Ailments Cloud Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reports that President Leonid Brezhnev of the Soviet Union is frail and tires easily have raised the prospect that his impending summit meeting with President Carter may be curtailed.

At 72, Brezhnev was said to be mentally alert in his recent talks in Moscow with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France. But his many physical ailments were evident, U.S. officials were told.

The assessment here is that Brezhnev cannot manage more than an hour's detailed discussion before tiring visibly.

"If you tried to push him more than two hours, you'd be asking for trouble," said one U.S. official.

But the official, who asked not to be identified, said Brezhnev's stamina varies from day to day.

One indication of Brezhnev's slipping strength is that the struggle over succession has already begun in the Kremlin. The situation is said to be similar to the periods around the deaths of Lenin and Stalin.

The main purpose of the Carter-Brezhnev meeting is to sign a U.S.-Soviet treaty limiting long-range bombers and intercontinental ballistic missiles.

At the same time, Carter may announce a decision to extend trade benefits to the Soviet Union. And the two leaders might agree to ban interference with each other's satellites and other surveillance systems.

Carter also would like to hold detailed discussions with Brezhnev about reducing NATO and Warsaw bloc foot soldiers, tanks and guns in Central Europe and on a number of global issues, including the Middle East.

But if Brezhnev's health curtails the summit, what might be accomplished would be similarly limited.

Since 1974, the Soviet leader has had ups and downs of health, sometimes disappearing from view for six weeks or more, but returning with bounce and verve.

His ailments include some deafness and apparent jaw and breathing troubles.

The time and place of the summit meeting, as well as the agenda, have not been resolved. There has been some discussion with the Soviet Union, but the real negotiations on a site await completion of the treaty.

On Thursday, U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance held his 23rd meeting so far this year with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin.

State department spokesman Hodding Carter said some substantive questions remain unresolved and that Vance and Dobrynin will meet again next Monday or Tuesday.

Carter said he hopes the two governments will be able to make an announcement next week about the conclusion of the negotiations.

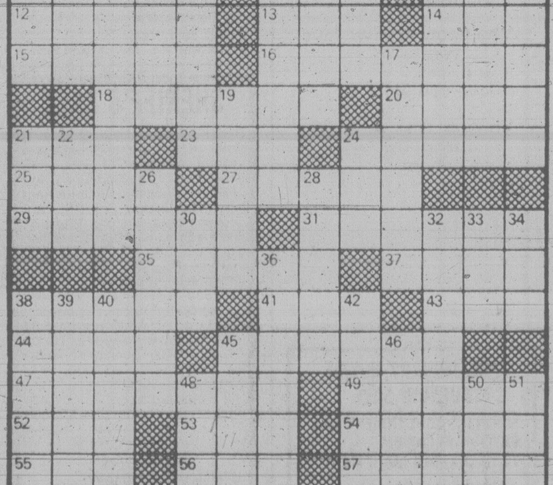
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



Jo'Burg Police Hunt Gunmen

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Police set up roadblocks and made house-to-house searches in the black township of Soweto today for guerrillas who stormed a police station, shot and wounded three officers and three civilians, then set the building ablaze.

The raid Thursday night was the boldest yet by the guerrillas in South Africa. The six wounded — three black policemen and three black civilians, one a woman — were taken to a hospital where two of them underwent emergency surgery, police said.

A police spokesman said three guerrillas were involved in the attack on the Moroka police station inside Soweto, a township of one million and site of bloody rioting in 1976.

He said the guerrillas pumped automatic fire from their Soviet-made AK-47 assault rifles into the station, then burned the three-room building to the ground, before escaping into the night.

The raid was the third attack on a police station by black insurgents. On Oct. 24, 1976, a bomb exploded and damaged a Soweto police station but no injuries were reported. In December 1977, a Johannesburg police station was bombed, but again there were no injuries.

Black guerrillas have had little luck in penetrating South African territory from suspected bases in Botswana.

Amin's Army Fleeing North

KAMPALA (AP) — Remnants of Idi Amin's army are reported fleeing from northern Uganda into Sudan and Zaire as the Tanzanian invasion force extends the new government's control east and north of Kampala.

Amin's forces are reported still in control of half of the country, north of a line stretching from Soroti, 200 kilometres northeast of Kampala, west to Masindi, 200 kilometres northwest of the capital.

But military sources said columns of Tanzanian troops and Ugandan exiles who returned with them were encountering little resistance as they moved into the northland preparatory to a linkup and a joint drive into Amin's tribal homeland in northwest Uganda.

Moving eastward from Kampala, one column recaptured Jinja, the country's second-largest city, and the Owen Falls Dam and power station, cleared the vital supply routes from Kenya, and then turned to the northwest, reaching Soroti on Wednesday.

A few Amin holdouts made a brief mortar attack on the column near Soroti, wounding two Tanzanian officers. One of the Amin men was killed.

Another column occupied the Nakasongola airfield 105 kilometres north of Kampala and captured Amin's personal executive jet there. Military sources said it was intact.

Amin's whereabouts are not known in Kampala. Some Ugandan officials said they believe he is still in his home-country in the northwest, but Western diplomats say they think he is in Libya.

The United States will probably reopen its embassy in Kampala within a month, the deputy assistant state secretary for African affairs, Robert Keeley, told reporters in Nairobi, Kenya, after a visit to Kampala. The U.S. government closed the embassy in 1973 because of Amin's hostility.

Keeley said he expects President Carter to lift the embargo on U.S. trade with Uganda, perhaps next week, since the wholesale torture, murder and other violations of human rights carried on by Amin's troops and secret police have ended.

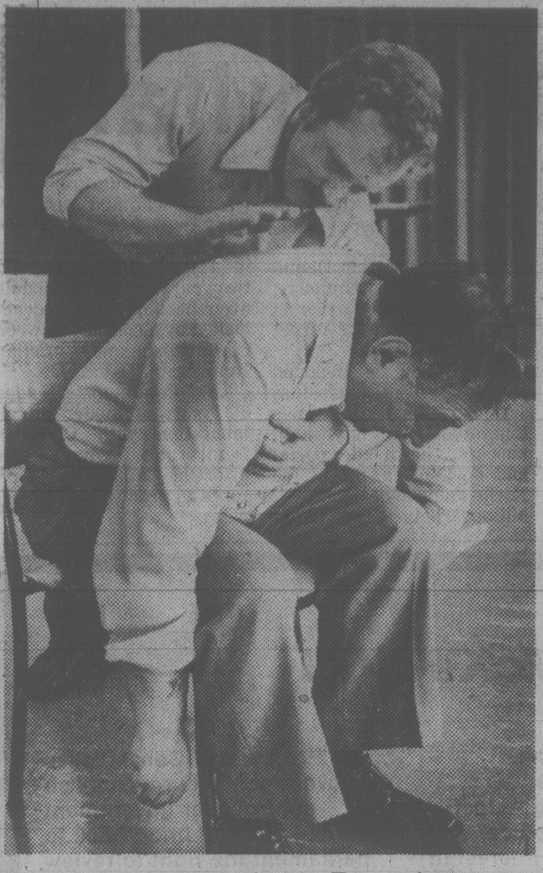
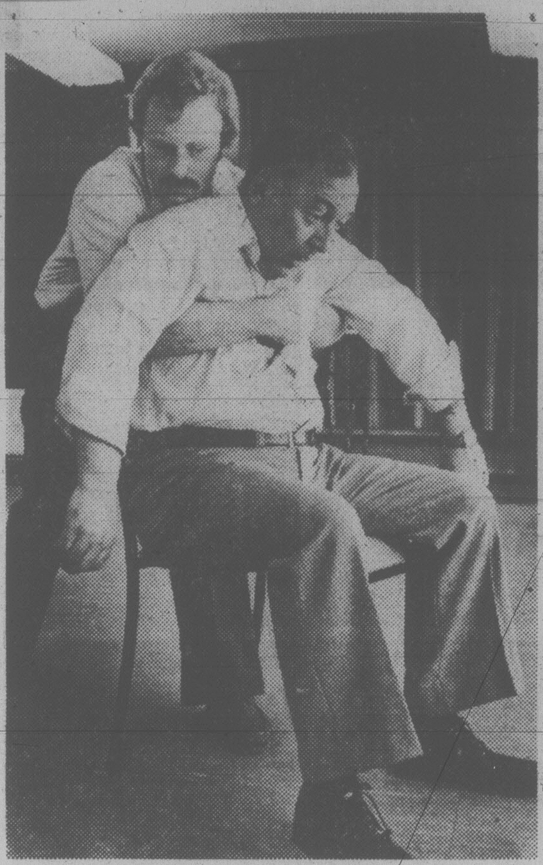
Choking: To Slap or Not to Slap

Controversy rages in the U.S. over the correct first aid for a choking victim — should he be slapped on the back before a violent squeeze of the chest, or is that slap liable to force the object deeper into the windpipe?



Red Cross technique: Four slaps . . .



. . . followed by a hard squeeze

By JEAN CARPER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — About a year and a half ago I nearly died in the main dining room of the Sheraton-Carlton Hotel here.

I was eating a salad from the buffet when a piece of tomato slid down my throat with astonishing ease and stuck there. I could not breathe or utter a sound because my windpipe was totally blocked. All I could think of was: only 4 minutes until brain damage.

I stood up and in the confusing seconds that followed signaled my two companions to call a waiter. My thought was he would get help — perhaps a doctor who could perform an emergency tracheotomy.

Instead, the waiter ran over, wrapped his arms around me from behind, put his fist into my abdomen just below my rib cage and gave a quick upward thrust that lifted me slightly off the floor. He did it again and the piece of tomato flew out of my mouth, landing on the floor a good 6 feet away.

I looked at it with amazement, some embarrassment and overwhelming relief that it had not been my fate, after all, to die in the Sheraton-Carlton that day because, as I discovered later, the management had trained all its waiters in the "Heimlich manoeuvre."

That set me off on a mission to find out why all waiters and waitresses are not trained in this manoeuvre. And that is how I stumbled into the middle of a medical feud between Dr. Henry Heimlich, the Cincinnati throat surgeon who originated the technique, and the American Red Cross.

Dr. Heimlich, well known in the medical community for innovations in chest surgery, had long been concerned about the number of choking fatalities and theorized that a sudden burst of air pressure up through the esophagus should expel an obstruction.

He tested his theory on beagles in 1973 and found it worked. Almost immediately, Heimlich took his technique to the Red Cross, suggesting they use it cautiously at first to be sure it worked on humans.

The Red Cross, however, has not adopted and does not teach the Heimlich technique, even though the manoeuvre has now saved thousands of people — Dr. Heimlich personally knows about 3000 — and is endorsed by many public health officials and physicians.

Instead, the Red Cross teaches a bastardized version of the manoeuvre that Dr. Heimlich charges is injuring and killing people instead of saving them. Dr. Heimlich has even forbidden the Red Cross to use his name in its materials. Consequently, the Red Cross calls its technique "the abdominal thrust."

Who's right, the Red Cross or Dr. Heimlich? The question is important, because many states and cities are now adopting ordinances requiring restauants to instruct their personnel in proper first-aid for choking.

Some, like New York City, have adopted Dr. Heimlich's manoeuvre; others, such as California, have gone along with the Red Cross. Others are confused: Illinois recently withheld 90,000 posters illustrating the Red Cross method because of the controversy.

Mainly at issue is whether or not you should slap a choking victim on the back. For years, the Red Cross has taught that a blow between the shoulder blades will loosen a stuck object. Thus, in 1976 the Red Cross adopted first-aid measures that combine the Heimlich manoeuvre and the back slap.

The reasoning was that the back slap would "loosen" the obstruction, and the Heimlich manoeuvre would expel it. The Red Cross now recommends four blows followed by four rapid-fire "abdominal thrusts," followed by more back blows and abdominal thrusts until the object is expelled.

Dr. Heimlich finds the addition of the backblows outrageous. He claims there is no scientific evidence whatever for the effectiveness of the back slap, that it is an old wives' tale. "On the contrary," he says, "a back blow is likely to drive the object deeper into the windpipe, making it more difficult to retrive."

Further, he contends the addition of the back slaps is confusing, superfluous, a waste of precious time and even makes the "abdominal thrust" ineffective. He says the small, rapid "jabs" taught by the Red Cross do not create the necessary explosive pressure of a true Heimlich manoeuvre.

Dr. Heimlich cites numerous cases of the ineffectiveness of the back slap. In one analysis of 910 lives saved by the Heimlich manoeuvre, he discovered that 135 victims first had been struck on the back without success. Of these, 27 had fallen unconscious before the Heimlich manoeuvre saved them.

Dr. Heimlich and others have reported numerous tragedies in which back blows alone were used.

In one instance a father pounded his teenage son's back for 40 minutes until the youngster was dead. A restaurateur in Illinois says he was almost saved by the Heimlich manoeuvre when someone came up and slapped him on the back, forcing the food back down his throat, so the manoeuvre had to be repeated to save him. In Ohio a 17-year-old boy frantically tried to save his 15-year-old brother who was choking on spaghetti by slapping him on the back; he died, although his would-be rescuer was Red-Cross-trained.

Last September a damage suit against the Harrisburg, Pa., school system was settled out of court for $352,000, after 15-year-old Gary Daniels, a retarded boy, choked on a peanut-butter sandwich at school. The boy, nearly four years after the accident, is still in a coma.

Since my accident and hearing Dr. Heimlich's arguments, I have asked the Red Cross several times for evidence on the effectiveness of its method. Its responses goes like this:

The Red Cross is not a "medical" orgnanization; therefore, it relies on "medical advice" from the National Academy of Sciences. An academy committee in 1976 recommended the procedures The Red Cross teaches, including back-slapping.

The Red Cross has no obligation to dispute, confirm or investigate the validity of the recommendations. By following the "consensus of the best medical advice available," supplied by the academy, The Red Cross is acting responsibly, it maintains.

However, C.P. Dail, head of the Red Cross' national first-aid program, also referred me to the NAS committee report for "the evidence" on back-slapping.

In the report there are 25 references that could be construed as evidence. But as Dr. Heimlich points out, 17 are unrelated to the back slap, seven provide evidence against the back slap and only one supports it. That is a study done on anesthesized baboons that Dr. Heimlich and other researchers claim has no relevance to choking humans.

Dr. Heimlich repeatedly has sent letters to the academy asking for specific evidence on the effectiveness of back-slapping. So has Cincinnati's Republican Rep. William Gradison on behalf of several congressmen. They don't get any satisfactory answers either.

Surely, there must be an answer. If the Red Cross has convincing evidence somewhere on the effectiveness and safety of back-slapping, it should present it, especially in light of Dr. Heimlich's persistent and persuasive attacks.

A reputable organization like the Red Cross that enjoys the public trust should not hide behind bureaucratic buck-passing when lives are at stake. In the meantime, if I'm ever choking again, I'd prefer my rescuer to forego the back slap. Just the Heimlich manoeuvre, please.

In Canada, One Slaps

Like their counterpart south of the border, the Canadian Red Cross in B.C. teaches the slap-and-hug method in providing first aide to choking victims.

And, as is also the case south of the border, the medical profession is of mixed opinion whether a good slap on the back is indeed all that good.

Some like Dr. Bob Saunders, an emergency room physician at Royal Jubilee Hospital regard the slap, while not harmful, as perhaps unnecessary.

Others, including doctors who sit on the Red Cross medical advisory panel believe the slap is important, if only because it may avoid the need to use the hug maneouver.

The two schools of thought here, however, have not become embroiled in the type of bitter feuding that is evident in the United States.

At least not yet.

But there are signs the controversy is creeping onto the scene.

Jim Tyre, senior Red Cross training officer in Victoria, notes that recently a Seattle television station highlighted Heimlich's criticisms of the slap method and since then first aid attendants and doctors have begun to examine the issue more closely.

His opinion, however, is unchanged. As far as he's concerned the slap-and-hug method is still the best. It's recommended in both American Heart Foundation and CPR (cardio-pulmonary resuscitation) instructor's manuals.

The first line of attack as recommended by the manuals is to give the choking victim four sharp raps on his back between his shoulder blades.

The theory is the blows produce an instantaneous pressure in the airways which may force the obstruction out of the passage.

If that doesn't work, then body thrusts should be given. They're done from behind, positioning the hands, with wrists locked, in the region of the victim's mid-chest and pressing inwards. The increased pressure on the lungs should dislodge the object. If it doesn't the procedure, including the back slaps, is repeated.

Tyre says certain precautions should be taken. For example if the victim is conscious and coughing, don't do anything. Let him get rid of the obstruction himself. A back blow may only end up causing the foreign body to become even more deeply lodged in the windpipe.

Also when using the thrust, avoid pushing upwards as that could cause damage to the victim's rib bones, he says.

Tyre believes every school child should receive basic instruction in the life-saving technique, but so far only a few local schools have taken advantage of his service.

One exception was Stelly's secondary in Central Saanich where Tyre spent an afternoon last month teaching the method to students enrolled in a waiter and waitress course.

Skylab's Barrage: 50,000

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — After faltering in orbit for months, Skylab is expected to plunge to earth in late June in a rain of debris that might bring unprecedented problems for the United States.

The space laboratory, which was launched six years ago and provided a space base for three scientific missions, will shower an estimated 50,000 pieces of metallic debris in its fiery return. However, no one knows exactly where it will come down.

Officials of the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) say they believe Skylab's disintegration through the atmosphere will be over a vast area, but there is little chance anyone will be hit by debris.

Nevertheless, NASA has joined forces with the Pentagon, the state and justice departments and U.S. government emergency organizations in preparing to cope with any problems.

For example, the North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) will track Skylab's final path across the sky in an attempt to predict where the debris will come down and to alert areas which might be in the path.

The U.S. justice department is advising NASA on how to handle any large claims which might arise from damage caused in the U.S. or abroad by Skylab's plunge.

In January, 1978, a nuclear-powered Soviet spy satellite fell out of orbit and disintegrated, showering pieces of radioactive debris over a huge area of Canada's sub-Arctic.

A major U.S.-Canadian clean-up operation followed and Canada this year presented a $6-million bill to the Soviet Union under an international treaty making countries responsible for damage caused by their spacecraft.

Skylab is powered by solar cells and carries no radioactive materials, NASA officials say.

Bering Bridge Fossil Links Uncovered

SEATTLE (AP) — Fossilized, butchered bones found in the bottom of two Alaska gold mines are new evidence that man migrated from Siberia to North America more than 30,000 years ago, says a University of Washington researcher.

The bones, first discovered three years ago by a miner, are the earliest known record of human activity in America, said Lee Porter, 31, who has spent three summers at the sites.

The mines are near the ghost towns of Jack Wade and Lost Chicken Creek, Alaska, about 15 kilometres from each other and some 60 kilometres west of the Yukon border, Ms. Porter said.

Terrorist Raids Sweep Italy

ROME (AP) — Terrorists attacked Christian Democratic targets in Rome, Naples and Genoa following the Red Brigades raid on the Rome headquarters of Italy's dominant party that left one policeman dead and two wounded.

Police traded fire Thursday night with gunmen near the Rome residence of Christian Democratic Secretary Benigno Zaccagnini, and a firebomb exploded at the doorstep of an appeals court judge in the capital, causing light damage.

In Naples, a terrorist group called Organized Communist Nuclei claimed responsibility for the firebombing of a Christian Democratic study centre which was badly damaged.

In Genoa, the car of a 37-year-old Christian Democratic city council woman, Maria Pia Bozzo, also was firebombed.

The attack on the Rome party headquarters Thursday morning coincided with the start of the campaign for Italy's general election. One of the slogans the terrorists sprayed on the walls was "Transform the electoral fraud into a class struggle."

There were spelling mistakes in the slogans and investigators wondered whether they were due to the hastiness of the attackers or the possibility that foreigners were involved in the raid. But 24 hours after the attack police had no solid leads.

They also ruled out any connection with the murder of 40-year-old actor Mario Piave, whose bullet-riddled body was found Thursday night slumped at the wheel of his car 30 kilometres south of Rome. Piave was the boy-friend of the well-known Italian pop singer, Milva.

Both the Christian Democrats and the Communists, the two largest parties in Italy, have been the target of terrorist attacks.

Last week, a 10-pound charge of explosives seriously damaged Rome's Communist-run city hall, knocking down the portal and opening cracks in the Michelanngelo-designed hilltop structure. Both leftist and rightist underground extremists claimed responsibility.

Italians vote June 3 and 4 in a general election held two years ahead of schedule after parliament was deadlocked by a conflict between Communists and Christian Democrats.

The Communists ended 2½ years of moderate collaboration with Christian Democratic governments after the Catholic party refused to grant them cabinet posts.

RE-ELECT
ALLAN McKINNON
PC

The Auditor-General has condemned Trudeau's government for having "...lost control of the public purse" and for showing little interest in providing good financial management and control.

A Progressive Conservative government will re-establish control over government spending. We will bring back to parliament the right to review estimates.

Dissolution In Rhodesia

SALISBURY (UPI) — Rhodesia's white-dominated Parliament was formally dissolved today to allow for the formation of a majority rule legislative chamber made up of 72 blacks and 28 whites.

The proclamation dissolving Parliament, whose House of Assembly consisted of 50 whites and 16 blacks, followed last month's majority rule election which was won by United Methodist Bishop Abel Muzorewa.

The proclamation was made by Rhodesia's acting president, Lt. Col. Henry Everard, and was contained in the weekly Government Gazette.

Everard said that acting on the advice of Prime Minister Ian Smith, who is soon to hand over power to Muzorewa, "I do, by this my proclamation, dissolve Parliament with effect from Friday, the 4th May 1979."

The outgoing Parliament sat for the last time on Feb. 28, when Smith, with tears in his eyes and a sob in his throat, declared that "a great and proud era" had ended to make way for a "brave new future."

On Monday, the blacks who were elected to Parliament in the recent election and 20 newly elected white legislators are to sit as an electoral college to select another eight white MPs from a list of 16 candidates submitted by Smith's Rhodesian Front party. The 20 whites who have been elected by direct vote are all Rhodesian Front members.

It is uncertain whether all 72 elected black representatives will take part in Monday's electoral college. The Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole, who came in a poor second by winning only 12 seats, has charged that there were "gross irregularities" in the election and has said his party would not take up its parliamentary seats.

Muzorewa's party won 51 seats and the party led by Kayisa Ndiweni, a chief of the minority Ndebele tribe, won 9.

Before a date is set for an actual power transfer, a 30-man Senate consisting of 20 blacks and 10 whites is to be formed and a president is to be chosen by electoral college.

Ohira Slammed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Premier Masayochi Ohira of Japan is ending his visit after a clash with leaders of the House of Representatives and Senate over Japanese restrictions on U.S. exports.

"They really laid into him," an administration official said Thursday, referring to the treatment given the 69-year-old Japanese leader by congressional trade specialists.

Several U.S. officials, who asked not to be identified, said, however, that Ohira's visit probably helped ease pressures in Congress for retaliatory protectionist measures aganst Japan.

Divorce Helping Housing: Economist

CALGARY (CP) — Divorce is good for the economy and in Calgary alone it adds $18 million annually to Alberta's prosperity, says economist Frank Clayton of Toronto.

Clayton made the observation in a report released Thursday on residential construction, commissioned by the Housing and Urban Development Association of Calgary.

He said that as more people live apart, the demand for housing increases.

Calgary's 25,000 divorces last year resulted in 2,000 extra homes — and that produced a big boost for the economy, he said.

Last year, $2.8 billion worth of homes were built in Alberta, 10 per cent of the gross provincial product, the report shows.

It resulted in 27,000 man-years of employment and a total wage bill of $483 million.

When secondary industries were considered, such as the manufacture of building materials, the economic impact was even greater.

Clayton estimated that for every $100 million worth of construction, an extra $63 million was generated in the country as a whole.

But because of the lack of secondary industry in Alberta, the figure for the province was only $25 million, the report says.

However, "if home prices continue to escalate as they are at the moment, people will just not be able to afford new homes," said Al Bell, housing association vice-president.

Israeli Planes Draw Fire

Associated Press

Syrian and Palestinian gunners fired at Israeli planes zooming over Beirut today, and the Syrians promptly flew protective missions over the tense Lebanese capital with their own jet fighters.

The low-flying Israeli planes drew anti-aircraft fire from guerrillas in the two major Palestinian refugee camps of Bourj el Barajneh and Chatilla as well as the shantytown of Sabra just south of Beirut.

A spokesman for Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization said Syrian peacekeeping forces also fired on the Israeli planes from positions south of the city. Pedestrians and traffic scrambled off the streets for cover.

Several hours later, Syria's MiG-21 jets made their run "in keeping with Syria's pledge to provide air protection for its area of peacekeeping operations in Lebanon," the PLO spokesman said.

There was no immediate comment from the Israeli command.

Israeli radio reported, meanwhile, that dozens of Arab prisoners will be released from Israeli jails late this month as a good-will gesture to Egypt at the start of negotiations on Palestinian autonomy.

In Cairo, the government announced that President Anwar Sadat has proposed an Islamic summit meeting to discuss means of regaining East Jerusalem calling its return a "cornerstone" to peace in the Middle East. Israel has insisted that the captured sector remain Israeli.

The autonomy talks by Egypt, Israel and the United States are to start about the same time as the prisoner release. Egypt had asked Israel for a series of gestures to encourage Palestinians in the Occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip to join the talks on their own future.

Political leaders in the West Bank and Gaza so far have rejected the autonomy scheme, which they see as a sellout of their goal of an independent state.

In the West Bank Thursday, Israeli troops used tear gas to disperse rock-throwing Arab students at the Vatican-supported Bethlehem University after the students raised the banned Palestinian flag in an anti-Israeli demonstration.

PLO Cell Smashed; 8 Charged

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Eight Israeli Arabs have been arrested and charged as members of a Palestinian guerrilla cell described as one of the most dangerous within Israel, police said today.

The eight were all charged with membership in the Al Fatah guerrilla organization, police said.

Members of the alleged group are between the ages of 20 and 25 and include three teachers. Monir Shakdah, 25, a laboratory assistant of Nazareth, was described as the leader of the group and charged with recruiting its other members.

They are accused of having planted a bomb at a Haifa synagogue in January, attempting to set fire to a bus with a Molotov cocktail and the writing of hostile slogans. The Haifa bomb did not explode.

Police were quoted as saying the cell was "the most serious and dangerous of those involving Israeli Arabs."

Skyjacking to Cuba 'To Murder Castro'

Hijacking airplanes to Fidel Castro's Cuba became a popular crime before the introduction of metal detectors and other security measures at airports a decade ago.

Few people remember what happened to those sky cowboys, but in the southwestern tip of West Virginia lives a coal miner named Larry Rhodes, who wants to break years of silence to tell his skyjacking saga.

When he boarded a Delta Airlines flight in Tampa in February, 1968, with a gun, Rhodes kicked off a spree of similar hijackings to Cuba from this country — 18 that year and 31 in 1969.

But Rhodes didn't spent any time in jail for hijacking. He lived a bizarre two years in Cuba, where the government arranged his marriage to a 16-year-old woman who was supposed to have been a member of the Cuban secret police.

And when he decided to turn himself in to a U.S. embassy after the Cubans deported him in 1970, Rhodes was still a mystery figure, a man the Cubans suspected was a CIA agent.

Now, because he wants to write a book about his experiences, Rhodes is willing to say publicly why he hijacked that jet from Tampa: he intended to assassinate Fidel Castro.

"I had my reasons," says Rhodes, 39, who has returned to the coal mines near Justice, W. Va. "I had known some Cubans, friends of mine, who had gotten some pretty raw deals. I knew them in Florida and Chicago (where Rhodes had spent some time). I sympathized with them. That was just what my heart said, and that's what I did."

A KELLY and a former Kelly were in the news this week. Princess Caroline of Monaco, right, and her husband Phillippe Junot dined briefly with Prime Minister Trudeau in Montreal, and actor Gene Kelly was recovering from hernia surgery.

Who is behind a group called the Voice of Patriotism that supposedly wants to bring Richard Nixon back to the White House in 1980?

The group was founded about eight months ago in California by Wally George, co-host and producer of the "Sam Yorty Show," a weekly TV program that features the wisdom of Los Angeles' former mayor. George is one of Nixon's biggest fans, and he thinks the ex-president should at least take a place as one of the world's elder statesmen.

Where is Elizabeth Ray living? She is sometimes spotted driving around Manhattan in the Rolls Royce that belongs to her latest boy friend, a parking-lot mogul. She lives in New York and recently spent a vacation at the Princess Hotel in Acapulco.

The marriage of Lee Radziwill, sister of Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, and San Francisco businessman Newton Cope was postponed at the last minute Thursday. Radziwill, 46, reportedly decided she did not wish to marry in San Francisco, but neither she nor Cope, 49, announced a new time or place for their wedding.

Khmer Rouge Lists Brutality

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Cambodia's ousted Khmer Rouge regime has charged Vietnam with grisly brutalities, including burning alive pregnant women and children and stringing prisoners like beads by running rope through holes in their ears and hands.

Cambodian U.N. Ambassador Thiounn Prasith delivered a summary of the accusations Thursday to the office of U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

The report charged that Vietnamese troops rounded up several hundred people in Kampot and Takeo provinces in February, "including small children, pregnant women and old people, sprayed gasoline on them and burned them alive."

In a brutal expression of discrimination, the Vietnamese captured numerous young girls and "immediately killed those who had a dark complexion." Lighter-skinned girls were raped and then massacred, the report said.

The Khmer Rouge, itself accused of killing hundreds of thousands of people since it came into power in April 1975, charged that Vietnam was embarked on "a deliberate policy of genocide" against Cambodia.

In another part of southwestern Cambodia, the report said Vietnamese soldiers pierced the ears and hands of Cambodian prisoners and "strung cords through to link them while they were taken to places of execution."

'A' May Be for Aging But Not Bullish Bronx

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Bronx, an aging aardvark who was sent here to end his days in sunny retirement, seems to have found the Fountain of Youth instead. Zoo officials say he has fathered 16 little Bronxes — and shows no signs of losing interest.

Bronx used to live in New York City, where he was senior aardvark at the Bronx Zoo. By 1970, Bronx was 13 and seemed to be pretty much at the end of the trail.

So his keepers sent him to Florida, where, instead of choosing a quiet retirement, he's begun to cut a dashing figure among the lady aardvarks of Crandon Park Zoo.

Bronx now is 22, believed to be an aardvarkian record for life in captivity. He has outlived most of his mates and many of his offspring.
